LLOYD GEORGE AND PEACE

In opening his speech in the British Houseof Commons, December 19, the pre-mier, Right Hon. David Lloyd George, and that he appeared before the said that he appeared before the House with the most terrible re-sponsibility that could fall on the shoulders of any living man, as chief adviser of the crown in the most of which its destiny depends. Not only was it the greatest war ever waged, but its burdens were the heaviest ever cast upon this or any other country. While the issues were the gravest ever at-tached to any conflict in which humantached to any conflict in which human-ity had been involved, the responsibili-ties of the new government had been suddenly accentuated by the declara-tion of the German chancellor. "The statement made by the latter in the Beichstag," he continued, "has been followed by a note presented to us by the United States, without com-ment. An answer will be given by the government, in full accord with our brave allies. Naturally, there has been an interchange of views-mot upon the an interchange of views-not upon the note, because it has only recently arrived, but upon the speech which pro-pelled it-and inasmuch as the note itrived, but upon the speech which pro-pelled it—and inasmuch as the note it-self is practically only a reproduction or certainly a pharaphrase, of that speech, the subject-matter of the note itself has been discussed formally. "I am very glad to be able to state that we have each, separately and in-dependently, arrived at identical con-clusions. I am very glad that the first an-swer was given by France and Russia, for they have unquestionably the right to give the first answer to such an invita-tion. The enemy is still on their soll, and their sacrifices have been the greater. That answer has already been published, and on behalf of the govern-ment I give a clear and definite sup-port to it. "Any man, or set of men who wan-tonly or without sufficient cause pro-longed a terrible conflict like this would have on his soul a crime that occums could not cleanse. On the other hand tonly or without sufficient cause pro-longed a terrible conflict like this would have on his soul a crime that occans could not cleanse. On the other hand, it is equally true that any man or set of men who, from a sense of weariness or despair, abandoned the struggle with-out achieving the highest purpose for which we entered it, would be guilty of the costliest act of poltroonery ever perretrated by any statesman. After showing that history proves that patched up peace terms were only an excuse for preparation for a still more terrible and costly war, he, repeat-ing the words of Hon. H. H. Asquith, spoken in the House just a week pre-viously, said we must have "Repara-tion and guarantee against repetition, or there shall be no mistake in a matter of life or death to millions." "Itet me repeat—complete restitu-tion, full reparation and effectual guar-antees.

MIXTURES OF GASOLINE AND KEROSENE

Those who are inclined to experiment with mixtures of gasoline and kerosene should remember that the two liquids are liable to separate if left standing over night; and as the kerosene, which is the heaviest, settles to the bottom of the tank, there would be a difficulty in starting under the circumstances. After the liquids are well mixed by agitation, the vibration of a moving car would suffice to keep them well mixed.
