THE SITUATION

That the Huns should be following a plan of such wholesale abandonment on the Western front manifestly means two things. (1) That British pressure is becoming more and more intense and (2) that the enemy has decided to shorten his lines in connection with the big offensive which improved weather conditions will soon permit. "The greatest retreat since the Marne," is the manner in which one correspondent describes the falling back of the Huns, and such it is undoubtedly proving. Villages and important points have been taken and it does not seem likely that Bapaume can hold out much longer. The successful result of these operations is stated to have put the men of Haig's forces in fine fettle and they will also have a most heartening effect wherever the British flag flies.

The fall of Kut-el-Amara, as announced over the Courier's leased wire last evening, will serve to offset the undoubted damage which the British disaster there earlier in the war undoubtedly created. The Turkish forces are still in full flight, and there can be no doubt that the advance to Bagdad will be pressed. It is north of there that the Russian troops, under the Grand Duke, are operating to effect a junction with the British.

Six vessels were submarined yesterday, three British, one Norwegian one French and one Dutch. Total tonnage, including the Laconia, 24,162. The record since Feb. 1st is 181 vessels. Tonnage 410,000. The destruction of the Cunard is evidence of the fact that the pirates do not intend to respect any craft, whether or no Americans may be on board.

The shelling of Broadstairs and Margate, resulted only in the killing of a woman and child, as far as loss of life was concerned. The invading destroyers were glad enough to skedaddle before British ships could come up. The incident still further demonstrates that no serious bombardment of the shores of Old Albion is possible.

"ARMED NEUTRALITY"

The latest pronouncement of President Wilson is a disgrace to the man and to his country. He seems to be totally oblivious to the demands of national honor, and to be still willing to temporize with the ruthless Hun. The Boston Advertiser very well summarizes the matter when it says: "Wilson at his worst. He has no policy." Almost as the occupant of the White House was unceremoniously being poured shots into the Cunard liner Laconia with Americans on board, both among passengers and crew. Surely this last murderous act will serve to force Wilson into a straight declaration of war, unwilling though he may be personally to take such a step.

It is very hard to believe that the bulk of our neighbors are in accord with the "hang back" tactics of their chief executive. The Courier would rather credit their true sentiments as those recently voiced in an address at Washington by Col. Harvey, a well-known editor and publicist of New York. Lamenting the spineless and dilatory course hitherto followed he said: "Let us hold back nothing from our allies who so long have borne the frightful burden of war for all. No special consideration! No mental reservations! No separate peace! None—upon this sole condition, that the infamous atrocity and the dastardly rulers, who perpetrated this most hideous and awful of crimes, shall be deprived forever of power over their own or any other people. If we are to fight successfully the battle of democracy we must know that democracy, not sham, but real, is going to win a complete triumph for all time and for all those whom, fighting, we love and fight to free. Then with whole hearts and whole souls and all our might let us put the great shoulder of America to the wheel of war and crush out of existence with irresistible force any and all who would deprive God's children of their rightful heritage of inherent right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness."

Col. Harvey it will be noticed is somewhat flamboyant as to the results of U. S. help, but apart from that his sentiments must more nearly represent the feelings of decent Americans than the cowardly "overt act" method.

STARS AND STRIPES NOT TO BE BLUFFED

 The world is watching to see whether manhood's spark is still alive in America.
 Cleveland Leader: It is a logical, reasonable, perfectly correct step toward war.
 Spokane Chronicle: The Stars and Stripes are not to be bluffed of the high seas.
 Pro-German Views.
 The views of German-American newspapers follows:
 The New York Staats-Zeitung: The possibilities of preserving peace in the situation that confronts us are by no means hopeless. During the first month of the intended German submarine warfare, no overt acts have brought us within the shadow of war. There is no reason for assuming that overt acts will occur in the future, despite the pessimistic view which the president takes from the reports published in the German press. Fortunately neither the press of Germany nor America are the controlling forces in the present situation.

Referendum.
 Louisville Anzeiger: The authority for "armed neutrality" for which the president asks will be granted by the congress; there is no doubt about it. Wilson's avowed purpose is to relieve the congestion of American overseas commerce. The next step he probably will take is to give permission for arming merchantmen.
 If there is a complication the congress alone has the power to decide about the imminently fateful question, peace or war. From all sides we hear the clamor for referendum to the people if there shall be war or not. That, and that alone, would be the best way to find out whether the majority of the American nation wants war or not.

Should Ponder.
 Illinois Staats-Zeitung (Chicago): Clothed with the power demanded by the president, conditions might be created which would have to be considered as a case of war, and congress would be forced against its better judgment to declare war. Here lies the greatest danger of a war, and congress should ponder a long while before acting.

Dictator Wilson.
 St. Louis Westliche Post: In judging yesterday's speech it depends whether one shares the view of the president that congress has the right to leave to him the decision on the future attitude of the United States toward the submarine warfare. President Wilson is demanding dictatorial powers which can become all the more dangerous since under the new espionage laws the people will not be given opportunity to express their opposition.

Why the West is For Union

By Dr. J. K. UNSWORTH, D.D., of Nanaimo, B. C.

REGARDING Union sentiment in the West you can count us in as solid. The average Western man ascribes the hesitation of the Easterner to his ignorance of Western conditions. He himself cannot think in any other terms, ecclesiastically, than Union. In church matters, as in all others, he co-operates readily toward a social objective. This is manifest in the advanced social legislation of the prairies.

But the hesitation of the obstructionist Easterner is not, as some Westerners think, due to ignorance of conditions, but to his conservative individualism in religion—in church as in other matters. Fine, noble, cultured as is Montreal Protestantism, Protestantism has never had elbow room, never the swing and expansion it has found in the West. The overshadowing Roman Catholic Church has prevented the full development of Protestantism towards social unification. It has emphasized traditional methods. It has prevented a full response to the spirit in experimentation. The difference between West and East is not in theology, it is in the social temper, in the co-operative spirit.

THOUSANDS OF TURKS TAKEN

By Courier Leased Wire.
 London, Feb. 27.—Turkish troops taken prisoner by the British at Kut-el-Amara now number several thousands. Earl Curzon, member of the war council, stated in the House of Lords today. The retreating Turkish army was being pursued and an artillery and infantry force was taking place, 15 miles northwest of Kut, he added. Besides the additional prisoners, the British had taken further quantities of equipment, munitions and stores.
 It was obvious from the telegram from General Maude, continuing Earl Curzon, that the scene of the operations had been transferred further up the river and that the initial success was being followed up. The prisoners were accumulated have been taken at different stages of the operations.

HOY DEMANDS VENGEANCE

New York, Feb. 27.—A news agency despatch from London says: Demand that the United States avenge his mother's and sister's death, was made in a cable despatch sent to President Wilson today by Austin Y. Hoy. He requested the President to grant him permission to be the first volunteer in case of an American army was raised, and said otherwise he expected to enlist in the British army.

BRYAN FROWNS UPON WILSON

By Courier Leased Wire.
 Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 27.—W. J. Bryan, in a statement issued here today, announced he was opposed to granting powers to the president, such as President Wilson requested of Congress yesterday. He announced that he would go immediately to Washington and use his influence to have the request declined.

Why the West is For Union

Dr. J. K. Unsworth, D.D.

If these men of the "Presbyterian Association" elect to remain in a denominational church which will wither before five years, they and they alone must be ready for the consequences. But the man who has seen that Christianity is a spiritual thing, a spirit to be left free to shape itself afresh in the everchanging enlargement of the human spirit; the man who holds that the welfare of humanity precedes and shapes the organization of the church. What it is the living man whom we should serve and not antique methods of serving him. These men to use a Westerner's figure of speech, must unalterably hold the plow handles steady and yonder the white stick. Hold thou to it!

How Canada Cares For Disabled Soldiers

Intimate Account Given; By Rest, Plenty of Food, Graded Exercises and Interesting Work, Men Beat the Bacilli

Writing from Ste. Agathe des Monts, Que., Sergt. W. L. Chinneck contributes to the Montreal Gazette, the following intimate account of how a wounded and tuberculous soldier is treated:
 "Something of the gigantic organization that has grown up in our country for the care of disabled warriors may be judged by tracing the career of a Canadian soldier, from the day he is wounded in the trenches to the day he is discharged from the service, fit to resume his civilian occupation, or pensioned according to his disability.

Case of Corporal Jones
 "For example, Corp. Jones, wounded at Ypres and suffering from shell shock, is sent down to the nearest dressing station. He is transferred to a base hospital and from thence, being seriously hurt, to a hospital in England. In three months he is convalescent. He will never be fit for the trenches again. Weak, shaken, and a little lame, he also has tuberculosis. But the time has come when Canada claims this son of hers, and he is very ready to cross the seas to her.

"And so he is examined by a medical board, a careful report of his case and condition is made, a copy of which is sent with the soldier, to Quebec. Having enlisted with a Montreal battalion, Corp. Jones is passed on to this city, and he appears before the military medical board there. He is recommended for six months' treatment at the Laurentide Inn, Ste. Agathe.

"From this moment, Canada, in the shape of the Military Hospitals Commission, has taken the soldier's cure in hand, and it will be interesting to show exactly how she fulfils this duty.
 "The evening of a summer's day Corp. Jones sets his feet on that scupulously neat little station in the Laurentian Hills, and straightway is driven to the 'Inn.' He has hardly got his coat off ere his temperature is taken, and before he has had time to find himself in bed and supper served him there.

"Next morning he is examined by the medical officer, Dr. J. R. Byers, who, more anxious for rest, could not write justly on this subject without paying a tribute to one whom every soldier, ever under his jurisdiction, must gratefully respect.
 "Having the devil's tattoo with deft fingers all over the bare chest of Corp. Jones, Dr. Byers presently orders bed, and more bed, for the disabled soldier. That means to say he is a Class A patient.

"What Treatment Does
 "After a few weeks of complete rest his temperature taken every four hours, eating three hearty meals and drinking pints of milk per day, the corporal is allowed to trade his bed for a comfortable canvas chair. So he lies all on a veranda, in a class B patient, and has ample leisure to admire the bold, wooded hills rising up against the horizon and the lovely lake beneath, in which the mountains are reflected as in a mirror. All day long he breathes in the health-giving Laurentian air, the best possible balm for sick lungs.

"Two months pass away and now this soldier is a different man. He has lost the languor that he brought to the mountains. He becomes restful and envies the boys at exercise. His weight recorded regularly, has increased by 16 pounds. A great part of the shank-ache has been blown out of his system, by the bracing Laurentian winds.
 "He comes up for examination and on this occasion Dr. Byers is able to give him two excellent things: First, fifteen minutes' exercise, morning and afternoon, and, secondly, the splendid news that in their battle against tuberculosis, the lungs of Corp. Jones have delivered a severe check on the hostile bacilli. In fact, he has actually commenced to drive the enemy out of the invaded territory, and threaten a complete collapse of the attacking forces at an early date.

"So now, every day, Corp. Jones puts on his puttees, grips his cane, and walks leisurely up and down and around the gloriously-garmented hills, and feels, after the prison of the chair, the freedom of life, and liberty has been vouchsafed him.
 "Every week, since his weight has not decreased, and all things testify to his making excellent progress; his exercise is prolonged by fifteen minutes, until at last he has four hours daily, two in the morning and two in the afternoon.
 "Education in Workshop.
 "And now we must mention one very important feature of his stay at the Laurentide Inn. This sanatorium has the distinction of being the first military sanatorium in Canada to convert the usually idle period of convalescence into a healthy course of education and training.
 "Whilst Corp. Jones lay in his chair a class B patient he was taught to read, to write, and many an hour he whittled away fashioning boxes and baskets galley colored. But now that he is so far on the road to health, a class C patient, considerably helped by exercise, he can undertake a more strenuous form of arts and craft work.
 "He joins a workshop class, under the supervision of Sergt. J. R. McLean of Glasgow Technical College and Naas Seminary, Sweden, and for an hour each day he sits at one of the eight benches, fitted with ever requisite tool, and learns woodwork.
 "First of all he makes a tie and collar rack. He is proud of this, but bah! that is too simple for Corporal Jones. He becomes ambitious.

He wants to make a lampstand. He has an idea, something really quite original.
 "Very well," says Sergt. McLean, "fire ahead!"
 "If he feels that way about it, thinks the sergeant, 'I'll give him his head. He'll turn out something good. So out of a lump of wood Corporal Jones evolves a lampstand. It does not quite tally with the image in his mind, but it is a very creditable piece of work, none the less. From the lamp stand it is a comparatively easy jump to a letter cabinet. And so on.

"The trouble is to restrain the boys. They work all day, and reluctantly lay down their tools at the hour's lesson is up. Four such classes are held every day. Thus 32 boys are taught a craft that will presently enable them to make articles of marketable value, and articles of practical use for their own homes.
 "Cabinet making, art metal work, picture frame making, illuminating, engraving and stencilling are the crafts first to be taught in this little workshop.

"The Mind Helps the Body
 "The institution of this new and important feature of sanatorium life lies at the doors of Dr. J. Roddick Byers, whose tuberculosis is not wrought through the body alone, but equally through the mind, which must be kept clean, vigorous and purposeful. If the best results are to be obtained, it is good to say that the Military Hospitals Commission manifested once again how truly they have the welfare of the boys at heart, by building and equipping, and equipping it with the necessary tools as soon as the useful purpose it would serve was made clear to them.

"Now, to finish the career of Corp. Jones. At the end of six months this soldier has got a very merry grin on good health again. His weight has increased by 23 pounds. He has taken exercise daily for four months, without any signs of relapse. Symptoms of shock have almost entirely disappeared. His lungs are healed; pleuritic pains have gone. He has had no temperature and no cough for two months.
 "A final examination is made and his good progress is taken carefully into account. But Dr. Byers decides that the corporal's cure should be founded on surer grounds yet, and that another six months in his good progress is taken carefully into account. But Dr. Byers decides that the corporal's cure should be founded on surer grounds yet, and that another six months in his good progress is taken carefully into account. But Dr. Byers decides that the corporal's cure should be founded on surer grounds yet, and that another six months in his good progress is taken carefully into account.

"The richer by his full pay and allowances for six months—deducting $8 per month, which has been remitted him by way of pocket money—Corp. Jones is now discharged from the army and readmitted to the inn for a further six months' treatment. At the end of that time he is given a pension, the amount being according to his disability.
 "From the trenches of Flanders to the hills of Ste. Agathe is a far cry. But it will be seen that in the work of that vast organization, the army behind the army, which takes the wounded men from the trenches and nurses them back to health, Ste. Agathe and its sanatoria play as necessary a part as the first dressing station.

"Considering that the case of Corp. Jones is typical of that of every soldier returned from the front, as well as those invalided without going overseas, and taking into account the thousands of disabled soldiers who come under the jurisdiction of the Military Hospitals Commission, all of whom receive treatment specially adapted to each individual case, it must be conceded to Canada that she shows her gratitude to her warriors in a practical way, and if her face wears a military mask necessary to the times, her heart is none the less solicitous of their welfare.

Private Patriotism
 "Private citizens in every part of the country have generously supplied buildings and grounds suitable for the care of disabled soldiers.
 "The Laurentide Inn is a case in point, for its free use, with thirty beds already provided, was made over to the commission by Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon, immediately after treatment for soldiers stricken with tuberculosis became imperative. Seventy soldiers are cared for at the inn and forty at the Laurentide Sanatorium.
 "To whatever part of the Dominion the enquiry is carried, it will be found that Canada has created a wonderful fabric of institutions, under the authority of the Military Hospitals Commission, and has elevated the care of her soldiers into a science. For the work has not suffered by the prejudice of factions, but is the embodiment of all that is best of a nation's self-sacrificing patriotism.

The same care that Dr. Byers gives the men at Ste. Agathe is being given by the medical officers at the score of other sanatoria containing tuberculous soldiers under the Military Hospitals Commission. As for the handicrafts which have been added to the lucrative program at Ste. Agathe, a beginning has also been made at Lake Edward, Que., and at Frank, Alta., similar developments are planned for all the sanatoria where any appreciable number of soldiers are being treated.
