SINNERS AND FISHES

A Baptist clergyman, preaching in Toronto raid that statistics showed that, in the United States, it took nineteen church members a whole year to convert one sinner. "What would you think, if nineteen of your good deacons and ministers here went up to Muskoka, where the fishing is excel lent, and they had every modern facility for catching fish, and as a result of three hundred and sixty-five days' fishing sent home one lonely fish?' Three hundred and sixty five days—that in cludes Sundays when, good people like deacons and ministers don't fish Well, it would certainly be mighty poor fishing; and yet this is the rate coording to which sinners are being hauled in. Surely there must be some thing wrong in the comparison. Either the sinners are not as plentiful as the fish in Muskoka, or the descous and best apparatus, or else they are pic nicking instead of fishing. We tear the truth is that the piscator does not know how to get after the p coator; he hasn't got the bait. He wants the sinner to join the church, but the church isn't the bait—not the right ind at least. He points to the church members, and they are not the bait. It he only knew it he may not be much in the way of bair himself. So the peccator swims freel, in his native elenent, hardly deigning to sniff contempt uously at the various propositions let down to him, but now and then turn-We, the people of Lillies, feel that ing half on his side to wink knowingly we cannot let this, the occasion of your departure from our midst, pass by with fish for three hundred and sixty-five days' fishing of nineteen able bodied you our appreciation of your services and kindness as neighbors. WHY 2

Once, I thought that I was cleve. Then I was a little boy. A Bverybody traised my wit, And my heart was full of joy.

They all said I learned so quickly And that I read so well ! And the writing in my copybook They said was "simply swell."

And I drew "just splendidly !"
"An excellent attempt !"
"A great future awaited me !"—
Of that I often dreamt.

I was a splendid writer, And quick to do my sums, I "should be a public speaker!" Fut "I must choose good chums!"

I could draw "like anything !" In composition I excelled; "He'll write yet, now, you'll see!"

I could do so many things— There all the trouble lay; Now I'm nearly that y. Fame waits for me to-day. "FRANK." Now I'm nearly thirty, and

A Tale of Three Toads

A gentleman living in Denver has discovered that a toad may have a-keen a sense of locality as a dog or a cat. He has been much interested in bees, and has seen much interested in bees, and has several hives near his house. Of late, however, his atten-tion has been quite diverted from the bees to four good sized toads that have taken up their abode under one of the larger hives. By watching them closely he discovered the position was decidely well taken. When the bees come in laden with honey they are apt to hit the hive and fall to the ground. Then Mr. Toud's active little tongue darts out and the dazed little bee meets an unexpected doom. This, of course, was very gratifying to the toad, but very hard on the bee. The gentle-man took three of the toads, painted them a bright yellow, carried them three quarters of a mile from the house and lett them in the road. On the evening of the second day three rather weary, yelloy-streaked to ds resume their positions under the hive, ready for the next day's slaughter. But their fine sense of location had to be s crificed in the interest of the bee busi ness—they were disposed of. But it is evident that a toad does his hopping in an intelligent manner.

Can You See Airt If air cannot be seen, what is it that we see quivering above a field on a hot summer day or even above a hot stove in the house? That question has puz zled many a head, both old and young The answer usually given is that it is the heat, but heat cannot be seen, and therefore it is not the heat.

The explanation of the phenomenon is really quite simple, like all such things, when we hear it. As a matter of fact, it is air that we see quivering, but heat makes it visible. The quivering the consecution is the property of the consecution in the consecution is a second by the consecution in the consecution is a consecution to the consecution in the consecution is a consecution of the phenomenon in the consecution is a consecution of the phenomenon in the consecution of the phenomenon is really a consecution of the phenomenon is really a consecution of the phenomenon is really quite simple. ing is caused by the upward passage, close by each other, of small currents of air of different temperatures in which the rays of light are irregularly refracted, and this makes the current
