THE HESSIAN FLY.

When and How It Injures Wheat. Preventives and Remedies. The Hessian fly is one of those pests of the wheatfields about which a little timely information seldom comes amiss, and this the Ohio station has furnished in bulletin 107, recently issued, in which are conclusions derived from their own observation, in connection with that of other agriculturists in various sections of the country.

The insect is a small, dark colored, two winged fly, about one-eighth of an

HESSIAN FLY, LARVA, ETC. inch long and shaped much like the wheat midge. The male is more slender than the female, Fig. 1, which, when full of eggs, slightly resembles a diminutive mosquito moderately full of blood. The egg, Fig. 2a, is about one-fiftieth of an inch long, of a dull reddish color. The larva or maggot, Fig. 3b, is, when first hatched, of a nearly white color, with a tinge of red, but later it is a very light green, clouded with white. The pupa, Fig. 3d, is formed under cover of the puparium, Fig. 2c, which last is known as the "flaxseed" stage, on account of its resemblance to a flaxseed in form and

The effect of the larvae, especially on young plants, does not appear to be quite generally understood. The second cut represents an infested plant fresh from the field, drawn from nature. The plant had been attacked soon after its appearance above ground and had not tillered. The leaves under these conditions are broader, darker green, more vertical and bunchy. The youngest leaf on a healthy plant as it unfolds and pushes upward is of a tubular form and spindle shaped.

The insect appears during spring and fall, the former period extending, in Ohio, throughout the month of May nd probably the first half of June, and latter or fall brood extending through the last days of August and much of September in the northern part of the state, and the last of September and the first week or ten days in October in the extreme southern part of the state. The eggs are deposited in both spring and fall on the upper side of the leaves, and the young, as soon as they hatch, make their way down the plant behind the sheath of the leaves. In the spring they go down to the first or second joint above the roots, but in the fall, when the plants are much smaller, they usually go down to a point just above the roots, indicated by letter a. The effect on the wheat in the fall is to reduce the growth to a mere bunch of rank growing leaves that kill out during the win-In the spring the maggots or young go down to the first or second joint above the roots and there become imbedded in the straw, thus weakening it, and when the grain comes to head the straw will topple over and break down, thus giving rise to what is known as "straw fallen" grain. The insect passes the winter largely in the flaxseed stage about the plants just above the roots. It passes the summer, largely at least, in the stubbles that are left in the fields at harvest. Thus the adults breed in spring and fall at dates varying with the latitude. They live but a few days positing their eggs. The preventive measures are late sowing rotation of crops and burning of stubble where this can be done. The remedies consist in the use of quick acting fertilizers in the fall or pasturing early sown fields preferably with sheep. There is no known remedy against the spring brood of flies.

They thrive on the rugged hills of New England, the mountains of Pennsylvania, Virginia and North Carolina, the rich bottom lands of the Mississippi and Missour rivers and the great plains of the west and northwest. They have no weak points and are pre-eminently a hardy

ENGLISH CRANKS.

One Eminent Literary Man Appeared at a Newport Reception

n a Golf Suit of the Loudest Possible Plaid-Another Social Lion Fefused to Surrender his Hat and Umbrella

When I lived at Newport, R. I., from 1864 to 1878, says Colonel T. W. Higginson, in The Atlantic, there was a constant procession of foreign visitors, varying in interest and often quite wanting in it. I remember one eminent literary man who, in spite of all cautions to the contrary, appeared at a rather fashionable day reception in what would now be called a golf suit, of the loudest possible plaid, like that of the Scotch cousin in Punch who comes down thus dressed for church to the terror of his genteel cousins. In this case the vistor also wore a spyglass of great size, hung round his neck, all through the entertainment. Another highly connected Englishman, attending an evening reception given expressly for him, came into the parlor with his hat and umbrella in his hand, declining to be parted from them through the whole evening, which suggested to a clever Newport lady the story of the showman who exhibited a picture of Daniel in the lions' den and pointed out that Daniel was to be distinguished from the lions by having a blue cotton umbrella under his arm. In this case, the lady remarked that the conditions were reversed, since it was the lion that carried the umbrella.

Waste of Water. Occasionally the typical Pat has a brilliant afterthought; sometimes it is not so luminous as he fancies. "Are you going to move the well, sorr?" inquired a man of all work, whose employer had announced his intention of building a new house in a new and more convenient spot. "No." answered the gentleman briefly, his mind full of his own plans. "Now that was a foolish question for me to be axin, sorr," said Pat, after a few moments' reflection. "Sure, and why didn't I think? Av coorse, ivery drap of water would run out and go to waste whiles you were moving it! It's nothing but a blundering goose I am!"

Now at last she gave her consent, for in her innocence she believed him. More marriages are affairs of the heart than we sometimes think perhaps.-Detroit Journal.

He Made It Clear. The Worcester Gazette tells of musician whose English is not as perfect as his music. While conducting a festival at Littleton, N. H., he was called upon to introduce a soloist. He did it in this fashion: "Ladees und chentlemen, I haf beene

BLUE ANGORA CATS.

Claims of Large Profits In Breeding In presenting the blue Angora we give an excellent picture of a specimen called "Roland" which possesses many desirable points and features, writes Robert Kent James in New England Farmer. These require careful breeding and training to produce. These blue kittens are specially sought after and command a much higher price than specimens equally well bred of some other color. In New York city a clear blue specimen can be sold for $25 at the age of 3 months. Grown cats can be sold all the way from $35 to $50. The same kittens in other colors would only bring prices ranging from

BLUE ANGORA ROLAND. $5, $10 to $15. It is singular that such is the case. But two brothers, one blue and another tiger, vary so much in price that it is ridiculous to think that there should be such a difference simply in a fad. The tiger is equally as pretty, yet to please the market the blue must be had. In raising these kittens farmers should take especial care that their breeding stock is of the best. It pays in the end to lay out a little more for first class stock rather than to buy what one can for the smallest sum. He should also observe that stock from reliable concerns, animals purchased from farms of notoriety, which would be the means of producing for him an exclusive trade, make his animals of greater value. The simple fact of having Angoras for sale does not mean that they are theroughbreds, nor need they come from any well known stock. We have known so many to make failures at the start that in encouraging others to raise these animals we give them a point which will be specially valuable to them later on.

A great many of our best breeders of the Angora say that a cat can be kept for the low price of a dollar a year, provided she is allowed to roam about on the place, eating such things as would ordinarily be given her and that are plenty on a farm. Now, if this same cat raises two families of kittens, averaging a total of seven, and should these kittens be sold for the lowest average price of $10, her family would sell for $70. If we allow each one of these kittens to be kept off and on for a year, which would be much longer, the entire family would cost to raise just $8. Now, there would be a profit of something like $62. What animal on the farm would yield such revenue to the owner? Each farmer can see for himself, and especially those farmers who live near fashionable country resorts and such places, that he could easily attract lovers of these animals to their place and sell as quickly as the kittens are old chough to be taken away. Another interesting point in connection with these cats is the fact that they can be raised without any care, and the women of ie house can have their charge and re enue for pin money.

How Dips Affect Wool.

The practice of dipping sheep is doubtless a very necessary one, and there is very little complaint for American territorial wool, except the sheep are dipped in preparations in which lime and sulphur are important elements. We have sold wool to manufacturers dipped with preparations in which two ingredients were prominent that caused them to have difficulty in dyeing their wool. We know of some wool growing sections of the United States which are tabooed by manufacturers without just cause because in formers years large quantities of wool were shipped from those sections with fleeces so discolored with an improperly prepared dip as to have injured the working qualities of the wool. Within a few days several prominent manufacturers have stated that they did not like wool from certain sections of the country because their experience with them formerly had been unsatisfactory. They had trouble with goods made of wool that had been dipped in preparations composed of lime and sulphur. Although this practice has been discontinued to a large extent in the sections complained of, the prejudice against wool from those localities still lingers, although at present improved and harmless dips have been substituted for those formerly in use If wool is stained and yellow in color from sheep dips, some manufacturers are afraid to purchase it, therefore it is important that sheep dips now used should be composed of materials or in gredients that will not prejudice consumers against the wool.-Theodore Justice in National Stockman.

The only type of mules now wanted on the market are good big mules suitable for the eastern trade and city use. They must be 15.3 hands and over, and weigh from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds and be from 4 to 7 years old. A well grown and well broken mule can be marketed profitably at 2 years old.

LOVE-CHARMS. The love-charm still lingers, the last link to the old days of ignorance and superstition when charms were believed to be powerful to cure disease and defeat death. The day of charms is gode, although some sweet miss now and again procures a love charm, not knowing that the greatest love charm of all is the beauty.

And this charm is in reach of every woman. When from the drains caused by feminine face which men admire, they may cure the trouble and renew strength and beauty by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It overcomes all the ills peculiar to women. It imparts strength to delicate organs, stops the drains that sap vitality, restores the color to the cheek and roundness to the form. It brings health back and health itself is beauty. It is impossible for the face to be fair or the figure shapely if there are pains, irregularities, displacements, drains, or weakness in the organs of womanhood.

"I had female weakness very badly," writes Mrs. O. S. Adams, of Fargo, Cass Co., N. Dak.
"I had to be in bed part of the time. I was tired all the time, could not do my housework; had fainting spells, nervous headache, backache and pain in my left side, when I would lie down; had pains and aches all over. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and had not taken two bottles when I was able to be around again and to do my work, with no pain. I am now feeling better than for many years." Many instances are Related of his Broad mindedness

s Well as his Tact and Diplomacy i Avoiding Religious Di cu sions With Persons whose Views with Opposed to his Own.

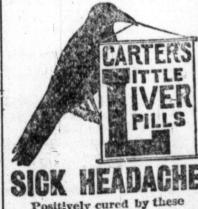

Many instances are related of Carulhal Gibbons' broad mindedness as well as his tact and diplomacy in avoiding religious discussions with persons whose views are opposed to his own. Upon one occasion, so the story runs, in Baltimore a young journalist was sent by his chief to interview his eminence upon a topic of local interest. When the interview was over, the cardinal and his caller had a friendly chat upon a variety of subjects, including the church. The journalist was a Protestant, and in the argument that followed he became excited and expressed himself freely from his point of view. Upon returning to his office he reflect ed upon the outcome of his visit and came to the conclusion that he stood a fair chance of being discharged should the cardinal repeat the conversation to his editor. The next day his eminence dropped into the newspaper office in question and asked to see the proprietor, who was his personal friend. The reporter was told of the call and quaked in his boots. The publisher and the cardinal discussed a matter of mutual interest to them, and before leaving his eminence said:

"By the way, you sent a young man to see me yesterday, and I was rather impressed with him. He appears to have the courage of his convictions. It would please me if you could do something better for him." Within a month the reporter who had anticipated dismissal received a gratifying promotion.-Raleigh Colston Smith in New York Times.
