A GOOD EXAMPLE

The Dean of Windsor, England, who was recently making a visit to the United States, is evidently a man of common sense.
 The liquor question is a much discussed one in the United States; and it is natural that one of the first questions put to a distinguished visitor should be prompted by a desire to get his views on that subject. The Dean, however, was wary; and his popularity in the country was none the less on account of his prudence.
 Many a time he was asked what he thought about prohibition. He effectually fenced by replying that while in a foreign country he considered it bad form either to criticize its institutions or break its laws. Consequently he declined to talk about prohibition—and he drank water.
 The Dean's is an example of good citizenship and good neighborliness. Good citizenship means obedience to law. There are many of us in this country who might with advantage to ourselves and public morals take a lesson from the Dean. We may differ in opinion in regard to the expediency of prohibition. It is a legitimate subject for public consideration. But while it is the law, citizens who regard themselves as exemplary persons should be content to obey it. If they do not they need not be surprised when persons who feel less responsibility treat the law with contempt.—Halifax Herald.

CANADA'S PROSPERITY

Through Us Or In Spite of Us?

When the war was on and this country was putting forth every effort, at home and overseas, to aid the allied cause, a great spirit of confidence and faith, of willingness to work, economize and sacrifice, filled every class of the community from the highest to the lowest. As a result, Canada's honourable war record has set her high among the nations, with a place at the Imperial Council percentage of farms owned by farmers in this country have been acquired and paid for in the farmer's own lifetime. For the present and future generations there is exactly the same opportunity. True, with each generation, and perhaps oftener, we may have to change our type of crops to meet changing market requirements, but surely that is a trifling task compared with that of those who had to establish themselves in a new country, create their farm, their community, their markets, and their civilization.

During the war years, the farmer, like most others, became unreasonably optimistic. As in other industries, he over-capitalized, tied up too much money in extravagant buildings, and expensive machinery, bought tractors to get the crops in more quickly and easily, without considering whether the actual earning power of these warranted the investment. With the depression, which has followed, this over-expansion has been a serious burden and has shaken the faith of some in ultimate success.

We must get back the indomitable courage and untiring effort of Canada's early days. The farmer must remember that in the last analysis he is infinitely better off than the wage-earner of the city. True, his cash income may sometimes be small, but he can, at the very worst, gain his living from the soil, while in the city the larger wage soon melts away in paying for things which on the farm involves no cash outlay. The farm products are necessities of life and must always command a market. The products of city industries must often create their market and their sale is subject to wide fluctuations. Sure of a market, then, the farmer's main problem is simply the lowering of cost of production to permit of a fair margin of profit even at present prices. This can be done and is being done.

We may call attention to the advertisement placed in this issue by the Federal Department of Agriculture. It is more than an advertisement, it is a call to united and cheerful effort, a summons to the Canadian spirit of the "will to win" which has burned so brightly throughout Canada's history—a spirit which is so well shown in a message received in Ottawa only a few days ago from one of the foremost farmers of the Province of Alberta. He says: "It started to rain the last part of the week, and this coming after the recent heavy rains has put the soil in a condition that it has not been in at this time of the year since 1916; the farmers are consequently very jubilant and if optimism could pay debts the farmers of Southern Alberta could by next fall cancel our National Debt."

table and a voice in international affairs. Canada must and will come, with equal honour, through the troublous times of post-war adjustment. The only question is, will all of us help—or some of us hinder, by pessimism, apathy, or class jealousy?

To the Canadian farmer this question comes with a peculiar force. Agriculture must be the economic balance wheel of this or any nation. It is an occupation where nature herself demands energy, courage, economy, and efficiency. These sturdy qualities radiate from our farms to industries in other walks of life, where so many leaders were country born and bred.

The farm home and farm life as the source of what has been and is the strongest and truest in our national character is interwoven with the history of Canada from its infancy. The settlers on the shores of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, toiling to clear a patch of forest and sowing their grain among the stumps; Hebert and the pioneers of New France, fighting Indians, enduring privations, wrestling merely a rude living from their small clearings, but full of faith in the future, if not for them, then for generations yet to come; the men who rescued Upper Canada from the wilderness; the Red River colonists, who, after two years of complete destruction of their crops, sent a party to the Mississippi for seed grain for the next year and won! These men made possible the Canada of today.

The farmers of Canada, then, have a rich history and a noble tradition to live up to. Upon them Canada's progress has always, in the main, depended; upon them it will always, in the main, depend. What, then, is necessary for the farmers of today? Simply the application of those qualities we have referred to—energy, courage, economy and efficiency, and under present-day conditions the return is sure and speedy. A very high

LLOYD AGAIN FURNISHES EVER-LASTING LAUGHTER

Harold Lloyd has again proven that he is the most consistent funmaker on the screen by his latest Pathe, five reel comedy, "Dr. Jack", which will be seen Monday and Tuesday at the Opera House. There are comedians who make exceedingly funny pictures, but Lloyd is the most consistent and dependable of the Sons of Laughter. "Grandma's Boy" seemed to us to be the perfect comedy—until we saw "Dr. Jack".

In "Dr. Jack", Lloyd has again given us a comedy with a serious vein running through it, but the laughter is continuous and everlasting. Never was there anything funnier screened than Lloyd's acrobatic antics in his wierd disguise as the madman. The poker game was a gem of cleverness, as was the comedian's scene with the little freckled kid. Then there was his ride on the back of the bronco-like calf, and—but why continue? It was a laugh from start to finish.

 Harold Lloyd is seen in the title role, that of a young doctor who cures ills by the "sunshine method". The fast and furious Lloydian comedy is interwoven with a charming love story, and here the comedian fairly outshines all the Great Loves of the screen. It's a great comedy and you really can't afford to miss it.

VERY SIMPLE

Old Sandy, the shepherd, was very proud when his son won a scholarship at the Agricultural College, and told the news to all his friends and neighbors. Walking down a lane one day he was accosted by another shepherd, who stopped for a chat.
 "Hoo's your lad getting on 'at the Agricultural College?" inquired his friend.
 "Oh, fine!" was Sandy's reply. "He's just learnt a quick, new way to count sheep. Wonder you an' me didn't think o' it before."
 "An' what is that, Sandy?" asked the other shepherd.
 "He simply counts their legs and divides by four."
