THE LITTLE GIRL

The little girl had been stinging and been caught in the act. Discipline was necessary, and her father, a prominent West Side politician, took her into the nursery, gave her a lecture on the sin of stinging, and scrubbed her mouth out thoroughly with soap and water.

'Now, Winifred,' he said, with fatherly firmness, as he wiped away her tears, 'you will never do the like again, will you, dear?'

'No, papa,' answered Winifred, checking a sob. 'Have you soaped your mouth out since the lecture, papa?'

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.

When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.

When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Lady (to her husband)—'I am growing so fat that I am beginning to feel quite alarmed about it. I have just discovered that I weigh 240 pounds.'

'Two hundred and forty pounds! And where did you get weighed?'

'On the butcher's scales.' 'Oh, then, calm your self! You weigh exactly half.'

CATARHUS RELIEVED IN 10 TO 60 MINUTES—One short puff of the breath through the BLOWER, supplied with each bottle of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, diffuses this powder over the surface of the nasal passages. Painful and disgusting to use, it relieves instantly, and permanently cures Catarrh, Hay Fever, Colds, Headache, Sore Throat, Tonsillitis and Deafness. 50 cents. At E. L. Street's.

He was a pretty little youngster with little, fat legs that stuck out beneath clean, stiff starched clothes. 'What are you going to do when you grow up to be a man?' asked a visitor.

The little fellow's face assumed an expression of earnest gravity as he responded, with a voice which was evidently shaken by sad memories of the past, 'Whip papa.'

JEWELS.

'Oh, grannie, I have had such a lovely time!' said little Nettie, running into her grandmother's room to bid her good-night, after coming home from spending the day with her Cousin Ella.

'I am very glad,' said grannie, drawing her into her arms. 'What did you do all day?'

'Oh, we had games and races and lots of things, and, oh, grannie! just fancy, Aunt Alice took me up to her room and showed me a velvet box full of such lovely things; bracelets and brooches and necklaces; she told me they were diamonds and pearls and rubies, and something else I forget, and grannie, Aunt Alice says that they are all Ella's jewels, and some day, when she is big, she is to have them all for herself to wear.'

'Dear me,' said grannie, 'won't Ella be grand?'

'Yes, won't she, grannie? oh, they are so lovely! you can't imagine anything like them, they are so bright; isn't it well for Ella—how I wish they were mine.'

'There are three beautiful jewels I know of,' said grannie. 'They are not like Ella's at all, and not what you would call real jewels. These three, beautiful, precious jewels I know of.'

'Oh, grannie!' said Nettie, 'what are they, might I see them?'

'You can see them whenever you like to put them on, and you can put them on as often as ever you like, but it is better still to keep them on always, and never take them off, for the more you wear them the brighter and more lovely they grow. Indeed, I often wonder you wear them so seldom, they are so very lovely, and you are so fond of jewels.'

'Grannie, what do you mean? you know I have no jewels, you can't mean really, truly, jewels like Ella's.'

'No, I told you I meant something quite different, not rubies or pearls or diamonds like Ella's. The names of these jewels, which you can always wear if you will, and not have to wait until you are grown up to put them on at all, are 'Love,' 'Joy' and 'Peace.' And you wear them deep down in your heart, not on your neck and wrists. And they shine right out of your heart into your face, and make it, oh, so beautiful! that every one likes to look at it. The little girl who wears these jewels feels so happy that she is always trying to make other people happy too; and she looks so bright all day long, while she wears her jewels; and when she takes them off she looks so dark and ugly every one turns away rather than look at her without her three lovely jewels. 'Love,' instead of hatred and envy. 'Joy,' instead of discontent and grumbling. 'Peace,' instead of angry words and sudden looks. Oh! what a difference these jewels make in my little girl when she puts them on and off, and oh, what a pity she takes them off so often! And then grannie kissed the little face against her arm, and said: 'Will Nettie ask Jesus to help her wear her jewels always?' And Nettie put her arms around grannie's neck, and whispered, close to her ear, 'I will, grannie.' Anon.

A BOY WHO 'STAMMERED.'

'I can't get it, mamma, and there's no use trying' and Frank threw down his pencil, laid his head on his hands, and sobbed aloud.

Now, Frank was a brave little boy, who hardly ever cried, so his mamma said: 'Why, son, what is the matter?'

'I can't get this sum, and I am tired, trying.'

'How many times have you tried, Frank?' asked mamma.

'Oh, ten times, I guess.'

'Ten times, Frank?' asked mamma.

'Well, four or five times, then; and I'm not going to try any more.'

'Put your slate and pencil away, Frank, and I will tell you a story.'

'A long, long time ago, Frank, there was a little boy who lived in a beautiful country by the sea, called Greece. He was not very strong boy, and of course his voice was weak, and, besides, he stammered. He heard some of the great men of his country speak, and he made up his mind that when he grew to be a man, he would be a great speaker, and in the evening, travelling with a large, handsome dog. The two put up at a hotel, and the next morning the gentleman went out, bidding care to be taken that his dog did not stray from the house. The chamber-maid went to make up the banker's room. Bruno was very pleased to see her, wagged his huge tail, licked her hands, and made friends thoroughly until, her business being done, she was about to leave. Not so. Bruno calmly stretched himself full length before the door. He explained as perfectly as possible that 'he knew his duty.' No one should leave his master's room in his absence. When the girl tried to pull the door open sufficiently for her to slip out he growled, showed his teeth, and finally tried them on her legs.

The woman's screams brought another maid, and yet another, and then in succession all the waiters. Bruno was glad to let them all in, but he allowed no one out. The room became pretty well crowded, and every bell in the house mounded while, while the walls echoed cries of 'Waiter! waiter!' Finally the lady who kept the hotel appeared and pushed her way irately into the room, asking angrily, as she walked in, what sort of picnic they

THE DANGERS OF A SCRATCH.

Scarcely a day passes that many persons do not, in some way or other, get a scratch, a small cut or a bruise that may break the skin. In most instances not the slightest attention is paid to this beyond the temporary annoyance of the pain and the possible irritation when the hands are put into water or some subsequent blow in the same spot brings an exclamation on account of the hurt. This, while a common practice, is by no means a wise one. The air is full of floating disease germs, especially the air of cities and towns, and an injury of this sort, be it ever so slight, might furnish excellent breeding-ground for some deadly bacteria. It is a good plan always to keep a bottle of prepared carbolic acid and glycerine and frequently touch all bruises or sore spots with it. This is one of the most convenient and effective germicides imaginable. It is said by excellent medical authority that either this preparation or listerine would prevent half the contagious diseases that afflict the country. It is believed that many cases of fever and other serious ailments can be contracted by a floating germ coming in contact with the abraded skin. Once snugly lodged in the most congenial dwelling-place, the germ multiplies with amazing rapidity and soon overruns the entire system. Therefore, whenever there is a bruise or scratch or any injury of this sort, germicidal applications should be at once resorted to. Some physicians recommend the use of castor plaster, but this is rank poison to so many people that its general use can scarcely be commended.—N. Y. Ledger.

too. Now, in order to be a great speaker, you must have a strong voice, and speak distinctly; and you know his voice was not strong, and he stammered.

'As I told you, he lived by the sea, and every day he would go down to the shore and put a pebble under his tongue and recite aloud. In this way, it is said, he cured himself of stammering; but his voice was not strong enough—it could not be heard very far—so he used to go on stormy days, and shout as loud as he could to try and hear his voice above the sound of the waves. Of course every day his voice became stronger and at last he could hear his voice above the roar of the waves. He kept on and on until in time he became one of the greatest speakers—orators we called them—the world has ever known. He never could have been that, Frank, had he given up trying.'

'What was his name, mamma?' asked Frank.

'It is a long, hard name for a little boy to pronounce, Frank. It is Demosthenes.'

Frank sat very still for a few minutes, then he said: 'Mamma, I will get it now.'

He took his slate and worked and worked. Suddenly he shouted 'I've got it, mamma' and brought his slate to show her—Harper's Young People.
