Tired of Farming.—A few months ago a man who had been a farmer from his early life, came to the city to buy stoves to sell again. "I am tired of the stove," he said. "I am tired of the stove, and all things considered, I am tired of farming, and so have sold my farm."

"Tired of farming," the most independent business man can engage in, because, first, there are disappointments and perplexities, and trials and vexations attending it. Remember, you who are tillers of the soil, that your care and troubles, and anxieties are few and far between, compared with those suffered by commercial men.

"Tired of farming!" Suppose you are tired of being in such a case? Do you expect to find an employment without trials and perplexities? If so, you are doomed to disappointment. There is no vocation in this world that will exempt those who engage therein from care, and fears, and vexation.

A Pretty Story of Lamartine.—In the tribe of Neggah, there was a horse, whose fame was spread far and near, and a Bedouin of another tribe, by name Daber, desired extremely to possess it.

A Good Story.—Inimitably well done is an article in Putnam, entitled "General Ogle, a Character." It refreshes the soul like a mountain breeze. The General was one of those strong, clear-headed, self-instructed, determined men, who, when they set their foot on the task of civilizing the world, were up to the eyes in the art of the railroad and telegraph, then consigned it to men of the Morse, Collins, Law, Fremont, and Grinnell stamp.

A Pleasant Scene.—A young man in a state of intoxication stepped into a confectionary establishment on Water-street, a few evenings since and called for a glass of beer.

UNITED STATES.—New York, July 28.—Orin S. Bonnell has obtained a verdict of $10,000 against Cornelius Vanderbilt and others, for detention and improper treatment at the latehouse. Bonnell had taken passage for California on one of Vanderbilt's steamers.

Canada.—The Montreal Transcript gives currency to a rumor that government intend to appoint a special commission to inquire into the circumstances of the Montreal tragedy; but expresses a doubt of their being any authority for such a procedure.

The General was caught, and he knew how to be caught, too; and he must recover himself. "Perdilly Mr. Findlay, all right. Most accountably to his room, and he'll be right. No question of it." By this time he was ready to look here, my dear sir, laying his hand on Mr. Findlay's shoulder, as if to reassure him, for the embarrassment was all on the one side now; "you see, my dear fellow, I had a design in it. When I write to a small pattern of a small pattern of a man, I make my capital in two inches long; when I write to my equal in length, such as yourself, for instance, I make them the usual length; but, sir, when I address myself to as great a man as Mr. Jefferson, I always make them as small as possible, with a pop over them, precisely."

THE GENERAL'S LAST LESSON.—"Will you please teach me my verbs, mamma, and kiss me, and bid me goodnight!" said little Roger L., as he opened the door and peeped cautiously into the chamber of his sick mother; "I am very sleepy, but no one has heard me say my prayers. Mrs. L. was very ill; indeed her ailments, behind the scenes, have been propped up with her pillows, and struggling for breath; her lips were white; her eyes were growing dull and glazed. She was a widow, and little Roger was her only dear darling child. Every night he had been in the habit of coming into her room, and sitting in her lap, or kneeling by her side, with the repeated assurance from God's holy Word, or related to him stories of the wise and good men spoken of in its pages. "Hush! hush!" said a lady who was watching beside her couch. "Your dear mother is so ill to hear you to night!" As she said this, she came forward and laid her hand gently upon his arm, as if the words would dim away from the room. Roger began to sob as if his little heart would break. "I cannot go to bed without saying my prayers—indeed I cannot." The car of the dying mother caught the sound. Although she had been nearly insensible to everything transpiring around her the sole of her darling around her elbow, and turning to a friend, she desired her to bring her little son and lay him on her bosom. Her request was granted, and her child's rosy cheeks and golden head nestled beside the pale, cold face of the dying mother. "Roger, my son, my darling child," said the dying woman, "I want this verse after me and never forget it; 'When my mother and my father were young, the Lord will take me up.'" The child repeated it two or three times distinctly, and said his little prayer. Then he kissed the cold, almost frigid features before him, and went quietly to his little couch. The next morning he sought his usual mother, but found her stiff and cold. This was her last breath. He has never forgotten it; he probably never will. He has grown to be a man, a good man, and now occupies a post of much honor and profit in Massachusetts. I never could look on him without thinking about the faith so beautifully exhibited by his dying mother.

THE WORLD OBTAINING THE GOSPEL.—Less than fifty years ago, the whole of the East was closed against efforts to disseminate the gospel. A tract in Persian, contrasting Mohammedanism with Christianity, filled the Government with alarm, and they sent immediate orders to Serampore, whence it had issued, for all the remaining copies of it to be delivered up, and no more of a like kind to be sent forth. If such things were permitted it was feared that India would be set in a blaze, and the British swept into the sea. But within thirty years, millions of souls have been put into circulation in India itself, and no one interrupts any hindrance.

THE KING OF PRUSSIA HAS SENT A GOLD MEDAL TO M. MERLE-AUBIGNÉ, author of the "History of the Protestant Reformation," in testimony of his high satisfaction with the curious researches which that work contains. The fifth volume, which has just appeared, relates to the Reformation in England.

THE VISITORS AT THE DUBLIN EXHIBITION NUMBER 10,000 DAILY. The Calcutta Mail of the 2d June arrived. Negotiations with Ava have been terminated by the Burmese envoys refusing to sign the treaty proposed to them by the British, and declaring that they would not sign any part whatever of the Burmese dominions.

A WAS SWAMP.—The late Anna Lawrence of Boston, it is said, gave away during her life more than five hundred thousand dollars. On his pocket book was inscribed, "What shall it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

CATASTROPHE AT NIAGARA FALLS. The appalling catastrophe at Niagara Falls, by which two men were swept over the Falls, and a third died a thousand deaths during the thirty or forty hours that he clung to a log of wood, and the brink of the precipice, has, as well it might, produced a deep effect in the community. What the thoughts or feelings of the doomed man were as he faced an inexorable death cannot be known. The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser gives the following particulars of the last and fatal evening, the public were kept in a state of excitement by despatches received at intervals from the Falls, bringing information of the situation of poor Avery, now expressing confidence in his eventual safety, and now almost despairing of his rescue.

OUR INFORMANT tells us that the man was in a part of the rapids where the rocks rise nearly to the surface of the water. A log of wood, apparently wedged tightly between the rocks, and crossed by another still higher out of the water, was his resting place. Here he remained, half-clinging to and half-perching upon the log, from which he would occasionally slip down and walk a little on the rocks, which were only a short distance under water. A few feet in advance was a small fall of about four or five feet, and here and on each side of him, the waters rushed wildly on at a speed of about forty miles an hour. Since our report yesterday was made up, about 21 o'clock in the afternoon, a raft was constructed formed of the combined logs and rafts in a square form, a highboard being placed in the centre.

THE RAFT WAS STRONGLY SECURED WITH ROPES ON EACH SIDE, AND WAS FLOATED DOWN TO THE ROCKS UPON WHICH AVERY WAS STATIONED. As it approached the spot where he stood, the rope got fast in the rocks, and the raft became immovable. Avery then appeared to muster strength, and, with a shout, descended from the log, and walked over the rocks to the place where the rope had caught, and labored long and hard to disengage it from the rocks. After some time he succeeded, and then with renewed energy, inspired by the hope of rescue, he pulled manfully at the rope until he succeeded in bringing it to the shore, the current towards his fearful resting place.

EVERY ONE GOT ON THE RAFT, MAKING HIMSELF fast thereto by means of ropes which had been placed there for that purpose, and those on the land commenced drawing it towards the shore. It had approached within thirty feet of the shore, when suddenly, which his course was directed, when suddenly it became stationary in the midst of the rapids, the rope having again caught in the rocks. All endeavors to remove it, were found to be vain, and much fear was entertained that the strain upon the ropes might break them and occasion the poor man's ruin. Various suggestions were made to reach him. One man went out in a boat as far as he dared to venture, and asked him if he would fasten a rope round his body and trust to being drawn in by that. The poor fellow, however, shook his head despairingly, as though he had not strength enough remaining to secure to a rope, and he was left at length a host was got ready—a life boat which had arrived from Buffalo—and was launched. Seeing the preparations, Avery unloosed his fastenings, with the intention of being ready to spring into the boat. Borne on by the rushing of the waters, and amid the breathless suspense of the spectators, the boat approached the raft. A thrill ran through the crowd—the boat lifted in the angry waves—it struck the raft—a shout of joy rang forth from the shores, for it was believed that he was saved—when suddenly the hope that had been raised was again destroyed—a moment's confusion followed the collision, and in the next the victim was seen in the midst of the waters, separated from his frail support and struggling for life. For a minute or two the poor fellow, striking out boldly, swam strongly towards the island, and the cry echoed from shore to shore that he would yet be saved. But soon the fact became certain that he receded from the shore—his strength was evidently failing. Gradually he was borne back into the fiercest part of the current—slowly at first, and then more rapidly. Swiftly and more swiftly he approached the brink of the fatal precipice—the waters had him at last, their undiminished victim, and madly they whirled him on to death, as though enraged at his persevering efforts to escape their fury. A sickening feeling came over the spectators when, just on the brink of the precipice, the doomed man sprang up from the waters—clear from their surface—raising himself upright as a statue, with his arms flung widely aloft, and with a piercing shriek that rang loudly above the roaring roar of the cataract, fell back again into the foaming waves, and was hurried over the brow of the fatal precipice.
