

A Hint to the Insurance Companies.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir:—I would crave the indulgence of your readers to make a few remarks in support of one of your contributors suggestions re the appointment of an Inspector of electrical appliances installation work. It has been claimed by most that the origin of many fires which have been witnessed in the city in the past, can be traced to defective electric light wiring. This in itself may be true, but in my opinion the theory is far from the fact.

In the first place it is an absolute essential for the installer to see that upon completion of his contract to wire any building for the purpose of electric lighting or heating, or in fact for any purpose of modern improvement such as burglar alarms, bells, or telephones, the building is protected from vagrant currents by having a regulation fuse to connect the exterior with the interior wiring. Where the practice is followed there is no danger whatsoever of fire taking place because should the wiring become defective in any way to cause a short circuit a "blow out" would follow immediately, thereby isolating the current of the point of entrance. Therefore my point is where wiring has become defective to cause arcing or little spurts of flame to issue from the point of contact it is the fuse that is the real centre of trouble, not the wiring itself, because it is very evident from the fact the arcing or spurts of flame are occurring that there is no regulation size fuse in use, otherwise the mere fact of the primary side of the circuit coming in contact with the opposite or secondary side would cause a "short" thereby "blowing" the fuse and eliminating any danger of fire to occur. It is chiefly to the Fire Underwriters and property owners that I address my approval of the suggestion made by your correspondent in former issues of your esteemed paper, particularly the case put forward by one signing himself "Ground Wire," as these are the people that are most concerned with the above facts and in view of the great demands that fires make of them as regards insurance settlements etc., besides the great losses inflicted on others who do not carry insurance, unfortunately for themselves. It is to my mind quite a paying proposition which myself and your former contributors suggest to them viz. finding and appointing a reliable and capable man to make an inspection of all electric installation work that has been done in the past or is about to be done in the future. And further to investigate and invoke the aid of the law if necessary in discouraging novices or "greenhorns" from tampering or meddling in any way with properly installed wiring or plant which would, I think, have the effect of convincing both employer and employee that "safety first" is the common law and that "ignorance of the law excuses no one." In one or two cases of which I am personally aware, men are employed at work of this nature i.e. (handling together lighter charged electric current conveying lines) and do not realize the danger to which they are subjected, besides the great loss and inconvenience their ignorance may mean to someone else.

It is my great wish that these interested in the above matter will not allow the present warning which the disastrous Martin-Royal Stores conflagration gave to them, to go unheeded and that they will take the matter in hand at an early date and have a capable and efficient Inspector appointed. Thanking you for space,
Yours truly,
SHORT.

New Hayakawa Hit in "Where Lights Are Low"

STAR AT BEST IN PHOTOPLAY BY STEP-SON OF ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON—MANY BIG SCENES.

Sessue Hayakawa, the eminent Japanese-American film star, has never been seen to better advantage on the screen than in his latest vehicle, "Where Lights Are Low," released by R.C. Pictures Corporation and exhibited for the first time at the Majestic Theatre to-day.

Mr. Hayakawa has many notable productions to his credit but none has carried greater dramatic interest or sheer entertainment value than "Where Lights Are Low," the story of which was written by Lloyd Osbourne, step-son of Robert Louis Stevenson.

Among the many engrossing episodes in the production are several very interesting scenes laid in San Francisco's famous Chinatown, before the laid off waste. Other episodes show how a Chinese prince defies the iron wall of tradition and wins the girl he loves; how Chinese girls are sold into slavery; how a man-farmer's son sinks in social position until he becomes a day laborer in an American Chinatown; how a man boards his savings for years to buy back the girl he loves from a Chinese slave dealer and how he proves that love is the greatest force in the world. "Where Lights Are Low" unravels a vivid story of adventure with the thread of action carrying all the way

THE SINGER

"Write me a song," said a man, "Which the lips of the world to sing. Make it tender, and make it true, And bring me this song in a two."

Have it thrill with the soul's And touch each word with your fire! And the poet wrote and his heard.

But never a heart in the stirred.

"Try once more," said the then. "Bard, go back to your gift and And write me a song which shall sing."

But the poet answered: "Oh king, I would give my life if I could, But never a song can be penned away."

Though the mind would bow to royal will, The heart may sing—and the still."

"Fool," said the king, "you know to use! Put them down and the fables Smooth the lines in your And the world shall sing with write to-day."

Your song shall live in the fame." But the bard was sad for his knew, Demanded more than his did do.

Then from his heart came a song Which swept like a summer along— Not set down at a king's command, Polished and turned for a planned.

Ordered and graced for a royal But something which sprang to soul of him, As fair and sweet as a day in And just a song which he had

A Chinese Idea of Government

Through Confucianism has an especial career, among the official classes, yet it is merged with the influence of Taoism to create a definite contempt for titles and an aversion to Government, that is, to the world understands that term. To a Taoist, government is interference by men with the operations of nature. He even the alien Tartars and were obliged to how to this their belief, by giving a mystic significance. He was agent of the people in Heaven.

He ruled but did not govern, ruled by not governing, by interfering with the real government customs of the people, which are immemorial and so interwoven with the operations of nature that they themselves are the workings of nature.

him was not so much political as an expression of loyalty to natural and moral forces that bodied. If nature failed to him, if famines and floods occurred, demands became extortionate, officers ceased to be fathers and to the people, these were that he no longer represented. Then the people became for themselves, pending the restoration of righteousness and benevolent representatives of Heaven.

The Daily Questionnaire.

WEDNESDAY, May 17.

Mr. Moore—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to table a statement giving in detail the names of the parties to whom fishery supplies were issued during 1921 in the District of Bay de Verde, by whom issued and the amounts in each case and what returns, if any, were made for such supplies.

Mr. Moore—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to table a statement giving in detail the amount of able-bodied relief supplied to individual persons by the Relieving Officers in the District of Bay de Verde from November 1921 to date, giving:—

(a) Name of Relieving Officer issuing supplies.
(b) The name of party to whom supplies were issued.
(c) The amount and value in each case.

Mr. M. P. Cashin—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister, if any further meetings have taken place between the Government and the Board of Trade or a committee of that board in regard to the reduction of taxation and expenditure, and if so, what has been the result and to lay on the table a copy of all correspondence between the Government and the said Committee.

Sir M. P. Cashin—To ask Hon. the Minister of Education, if he, Hon. Dr. Barnes, his Deputy, Dr. V. P. Burke, or any other officials of the Department are proposing to visit the battlefields of France, the coming summer, if so, to give the names of each official going, also to say if the Department is paying all or any of their expenses, and if so, what amounts are being paid to each, and what advantage is the Educational Department of the country to receive from their visit to France.

Sir M. P. Cashin—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to lay on the table a statement showing if any amounts are yet due to the Government on account of the salt cargo of the "Tuckahoe," recently acquired into a Commission, if so, what is the amount, and to give the name of the party or parties by whom it is owed, and if by more than one, the amounts owed by each of the said parties; and also to say what steps the Government are taking to collect these amounts, and what portion of them it is hoped to collect.

Sir M. P. Cashin—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister, if it is correct, as stated by the Auditor-General, that although payment for the "Tuckahoe" was made by a cheque on the Surplus Trust Fund and Mr. Keating was instructed to draw the cheque to cover the cost of the salt, there was no special warrant issued in connection with this, and if so, what member of the Government authorized Mr. Keating to draw this cheque, and what authority had this said member of the Government for doing this, and if he had no authority what action has the Government taken in connection with the matter.

Mr. MacDonnell—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister:—

(1) Whether the Act amending the Company's Act passed at the last session of this Legislature as at present constituted, enacted the Reid Company to subsidize targets and resources Dominion into various panies, in a manner before the passing of an Act place the of this Dominion in position regarding or assets of the Company's defaulting contract.

(2) If so, did the passing of an Act place the of this Dominion in position regarding or assets of the Company's defaulting contract.

(3) If so, why did the pass any such Act.
