WORK AND WAGES.

WHERE VOTES ARE MADE.

The Business at the Court of Revision.

The Liberals Appear To Be Adding the Most-A Chance for Mechanics to Attend,

Monday Afternoon.

The second session of the Court of Revision commenced at 2 n.m., Judge Davis presiding. As a good many applicants from all parts of the city were in waiting, the judge consented, after Nos. 1 and 2 wards had been dealt with, to take up the cases as they came along, and in this way a good many names were disposed of. Thanks to the comparatively simple and clear nature of the Ontario Act the technicalities with which the Dominion law bristles were comspicuously absent. In only a couple of instances was there possibility of argument.

One of these arose out of the Conservative objection to Mr. Frank W. Lilley's vote. Mr. Lilley has been traveling in Canada and the States for a New York firm since April. His family and home are still in London, and he has several times returned. He is still a British subject. Mr. Cox for the Conservatives contended that he was not a resident within the act. Judge Davis said he was a trongly of the opinion that Mr. Lilley's vote was good, as he was a yearly tenant, his family was still here and he had no other domicile. He allowed the case to stand for argument.

The Conservatives appealed against the vote of Mr. Frank Magee, of the Magee Manufacturing Company. He had been out of the Province two previous months in the year, having gone to Montreal to relieve his brother, who met with an accident. This also stood for argument, although the judge expressed the opinion that Mr. Magee's absence was fatal to his vote here.

The following Conservative applications to be put on the list were allowed: Wm. Oun, Emerson Brooks, Wm. Wilson, W. D. Sharp, Frederick Bide, Gideon Duke, Adam A. Duke, Malcoim V.
