Butchers' Meats Are Slightly Stronger -No Change in Prices of Dairy Products-The Quotations.

The local market was very slack today, even more so than last week at the same time. Sales in most varieties was rather slow. Oats still continue to advance, and today they are selling at $1 65. The supply is very short, and there is no likelihood of any drop in the immediate future at least. Hay continues firm. One load today brought as high as $14 50, but the high price for the remainder was $14. There were only about fifteen loads offered, and there will be a demand for tomorrow's Butchers' meats slightly stronger Dressed hogs brought as high as $10, while veal sold up to $8 56. There was no change in the price of dairy products, and the supply was Vegetables, too, remained about the same, the only noticeable change being in the price of asparagus, which sold from 50 cents to 60 cents, instead of 75 cents as in the previous market.

New York, May 20.—This market i led entirely by wonderful strength in the steel shares, and by the persistent buying of Southern Pacific. When the news came out that the Harriman shares would not increase their dividends, there were recessions, although they did not go far enough to really disturb matters. There has been good buying of steel stocks, and the market on the whole has retained its strength sufficiently well to win support from outside sources. While prices look high it seems as if they would go higher.
