Waste In Orchards

Farmers Unwilling to Take Chances on' European Markets-May Be Given to Poor.

Thousands of barrels of apples are going to waste, rotting in the orchards in the district immediately around London, according to farmers. Farmers are unwilling to harvest th fruit because, they say, the European market is uncertain this year. Enough fruit for the individual needs of the farmers, and in some cases, a small supply for the local markets is being picked. In some orchards, it is said; the fruit is thickly scattered over acres. The apple districts are overrun with pickers seeking employment. It is possible that a scheme, similar Toronto, Sept. 22.—Trade at union to the ones used in Boston and Toronstockyards was light today, and the to, may be used here.
