Its home is not on the frontier nor in the crowded city. Its dwelling is in the heart.

It speaks a score of dialects but one language. God has given to man the inalienable rights of life, liberty and the rsuit of happiness. The best government is that which best protects these rights and restrains people from trampling on one another.

The best way to secure such a government is to trust the common sense of the people to choose wise and honest leaders and governors. The right to save is equivalent to the right to earn, and the end of freedom is fair play for all.

It is the duty of the United States as a new republic, first to grow strong and firm, next to use that strength for the benefit of mankind, and all the time to set an example of justice, benevolence and fair dealing to all nations.
