

Reflective.—A French Bishop, said lately in a sermon—“Let women remember while putting on a profuse and expensive attire, how narrow are the gates of Paradise.”

An old lady was apt to be troubled in her dreams, and being superstitious withal, informed the clergyman of the parish that on the night previous she dreamed she saw her grandfather, who had been dead for ten years. The clergyman asked her what she'd been eating for supper. “Oh, only half a mince pie.”—“Well,” said he, “if you had devoured the other half, you might probably have seen your grandmother.”

Discords.—Avoid little discords, for these may lead to great ones.

Humility of Worth.—A man of great worth or extraordinary ability is unostentatious and humble, as the bough, heavily laden with rich fruit, hangs its head to the ground.

Idleness.—The proverb tells us that idle persons can never find time for anything, and the reason is that they have a huge bundle of arrears to engross their attention. They can do little or nothing because they always intending to do a vast deal, or more strictly speaking, because they have always a vast deal waiting to be done.

B. STEWART,
BARBER.

“Loud roared the dreadful thunder,
And the rain began to drop,
Though the clouds are rent asunder,
I'm always in the shop.
In readiness to shave you,
To cut or dress your hair,
Or to sell to those who pay me,
From my little stock of wares,
I have candies and perfumery,
Hair Oil for those who need,
And the St. Thomas “Rough Notes”
For my customers to read.
I'll clean your clothes when greasy,
Or stop your razor when its dull,
So that shaving will be easy,
When the barber is not well.
Remember the stand is next door to Mr. A.
Henderson's saloon.
