Go to a fool for advice. If it doesn't suit you, you need not worry about following it.

Sir Redvers Buller was fortunate at the outset of his military career, inasmuch as he received what Napoleon the Less called his "baptism of fire" within two years of the date of his first commission; this was in the China War of 1860. In 1870, he took part in the Red River Expedition, which first brought him under the notice of Lord Wolseley.
