

limbs, in spite of which he succeeded in bringing the inanimate form of the child safely on shore. The affair was made known to the officer commanding, who, as soon as possible, forwarded the whole case to the colonel; and it is to be hoped that the man will in some way be rewarded for his gallant conduct, which would have been an act of bravery had it been done half dressed, but, accounted as he was, it was doubly so. We may add that, through the means of Dr. Reid, R.M., the child was completely brought round.

OBITUARY.

Died, in this city, on Friday, the 10th June, 1868, at the age of 33 years, ALEX. WORKMAN, Jr., Esq., formerly Lieutenant and Acting Captain of the Ottawa Field Battery,—only son of our respected fellow-citizen, ALEX. WORKMAN, Esq., Merchant, and ex-Mayor of Ottawa.

In a former issue we briefly noticed the death of this lamented young gentleman—we now deem it our duty to give a more extended notice of the deceased. The subject of this memoir was a young man of much promise and amiability of character, and in this community where he was known from his earliest childhood, he was highly esteemed and justly respected for his integrity and worth. Many of our readers will remember that the subject of this notice took a successful and active part in the organization of the Ottawa Field Battery of Artillery, of which Corps of Volunteers he was an officer under the command of the late Lieut. Col. Turner. In this fine and efficient Corps he rose from the grade of Ensign to that of Acting Captain, in which capacity he was out with the Battery at the Front during the troubles of 1866. He always took a strong and zealous interest in the advancement of the Corps to which he belonged, by the officers and men of which his memory will long be cherished with affection and regret. We may add that he only resigned his position in the Battery when failing health rendered him no longer capable of successfully commanding it.

In the summer of 1865, by medical advice, Mr. Workman, Jr., took a trip to Europe, and visited most of the principal cities of the old country. Not deriving so much benefit as he had anticipated from his sojourn there, he returned to this country in the fall of the same year, much improved in appearance, if not in actual health. But the disease under which he suffered so long, (disease of the heart,) was gradually but surely gaining strength, and finally carried him away to, we trust, a happier and better world.

The remains of the deceased were conveyed to Montreal for interment in the family burial place. As the procession, formed of his late comrades, preceded by a military band, and a long line of citizens, passed on its way to the Railway Station, all places of business on the route were closed, thus evincing their respect for the honored dead.
