

TEMPERANCE.

They wanted more of the clergy in the forefront of the battle. They wanted men who would speak with wisdom and who would speak in love, who would speak with no uncertain sound, and would never give up speaking for the fear of any man. They wanted more laymen and more laywomen in this cause. He hoped before long they should be able to form a strong and successful band of women leagued together in the love of God, connected with the Church of England, who should strive to bring other women up to the same standpoint on which they themselves had taken their stand. He was perfectly persuaded that though by the Legislature they might remove a certain number of obstacles and fences in the way, until England became a moral and a more God-fearing nation we should never be a really sober or temperate nation.

The MAYOR, who said he had no hesitation in his own mind in giving the sanction of his name and presence to the proceedings of that night, and also in bringing under contribution the power and influence which he possessed temporarily for the furtherance of this great and important enterprise. He stood before them a Methodist of the fifth generation on both sides of the house—his grandfather having entertained John Wesley more than once on his visit to Newcastle. The body to which he belonged was strictly and staunchly Protestant, whatever else they might be, and there was much common ground that they could occupy in which neither political bias nor religious difficulty need enter at all. All work shoulder to shoulder, and they could all toe the line, and present a bold, magnificent phalanx to the forces of evil which exposed themselves to them. Newcastle, next to Liverpool, enjoyed the unenviable notoriety of being the most drunken city in the kingdom. He did not wonder that they heard that observation with feelings of disappointment, and no wonder that he urged upon them the necessity for increased work. He spoke of the benefits of being a teetotaler personally, how he had not exactly pined away, how he worked better than when he took alcohol, how his health was better and his pocket heavier. Following the advice of their chairman, who came to see him some years ago when ill, he had substituted lemons every morning and night for whiskey, and he had never had lumbago since.

Canon WILBERFORCE, who was received with loud applause said he was a member of the Church of England, and he was proud of it. His grandfather entertained John Wesley, and, whilst he was not there to treat the Mayor to a dissertation on the virtues of the Church, he did venture to say that there never was a time when its members were more clearly realising their responsibilities than now. They were beginning to see the significant fact that all the labour leaders were Temperance men, and the great proportion of them total abstainers. They saw that a man like John Burns could tell his fellows that if more wages meant more drink, it would be better for them to revert to their previous position. And, in lifting the people out of their degrading environment, he saw in every direction the true justification for an establishment and endowed clergy so that there might be in all parts of that country men with a University education, who by virtue of their position were landed above prejudice, and were thus able to take their place by the side of working men in all cases of oppression, temptation, robbery, and wrong. They were beginning to do that.

Little Mabel Doroty Cured of St. Vitus' Dance After Four Physicians Had Ineffectually Treated the Case. From the Niagara Falls Review.

In speaking to a friend recently we were asked if we had heard that little Mabel Doroty, the eight year old daughter of Mrs. Doroty, Ontario Avenue, had been miraculously cured of St. Vitus' dance. We replied in the negative, but stated that we would investigate the case and ascertain the facts. Accordingly we visited the home of Mrs. Doroty, when she related the facts as follows: "My little girl has had a miraculous experience. It is about two years and a half since Mabel was stricken with St. Vitus' dance caused by the weakening effects of la grippe and rheumatism. Three local physicians were called in, as was also one doctor of considerable reputation from Niagara Falls, N.Y., but in the face of the prescriptions of these physicians and the best of care, Mabel grew rapidly worse. She could not be left alone an instant and was as helpless as an infant, as she had no control of her limbs at all. She could neither walk without assistance nor take food or drink. At this stage one of the attending physicians said, "Mrs. Doroty, there is no use in my coming here any more. There is nothing that I know of can be done for your little girl." Well, matters went on that way for a short time with no better results till one day I was sure the poor child was dying. I remembered having seen accounts of St. Vitus' dance cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and I determined to try them. I was skeptical as to the effect and only tried them as a last resort, but was soon agreeably surprised at the result. It was not long before they had a good effect, and I then felt certain I had found a remedy that could cure my little girl if anything could. In less than three months she was so much better that the dread disease had almost disappeared, and the pills were discontinued. In a few months, however, she showed that the symptoms had not been entirely eradicated from her system, so I had her again commence the use of the Pink Pills. I feel certain that all traces of the awful malady will be swept away, for she goes to school now and we have not the slightest anxiety in leaving her alone. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is certainly a grand remedy and I would not be without them under any consideration, for I think they are worth their weight in gold, as in my little girl's case they have been true to all they advertise. I am only too glad to let others who may be unfortunate know of this miraculous cure through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

When strong tributes as these can be had to the wonderful merits of Pink Pills, it is little wonder that their sales reach such enormous proportions, and they are the favorite remedy with all classes. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape,) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ontario, or Schenectady, N. Y.

AN ESSAY

Republished with additions from the "Irish Ecclesiastical Gazette."

BY REV. JAMES A. CARR, M.A., LL.D., Vicar of Whitechurch.

"Dr. Carr has done well to reprint these essays from the Irish Ecclesiastical Gazette. They state the case against Evening Communion forcibly and clearly."—Illustrated Church News.

The Bishop of Derry writes:—"I never read sixteen more pregnant and comprehensive pages. Your learning and industry have put together all that really bears upon the subject. And your logic drives home the weapon which your erudition has formed."
