PHILLIPS-SHAW PARISH PRIEST

Pretty Drama Presented by the Stock Combination at the Grand Opera House This Week.

A pretty love story, perfectly staged and acted by an excellent company, is the offering at the Grand Opera House this week. It is the late Daniel Sully's famous play, "The Parish Priest," a drama that in the old days was a favorite with theatregoers. The company presenting it is the Phillips-Shaw players, who, during their stay here, have given several first-class productions. In the audience last night were many members of the Knights of St. John and the ladies auxiliary, and that they were delighted with the performance was evidenced by the enthusiastic manner in which the work of the company was received, and the applause which followed the act climaxes.

One of the noticeable features of the productions by this stock company is the artistic manner in which the stage settings are put on. Everything is bright and new and atmosphere is given in an appropriate manner. No prettier production has been seen on the local stage even by traveling companies playing at a scale of high prices. The stage management and mechanical staff are to be complimented on their work, as it is a big factor in the success of stock productions.

In keeping with the artistic scenic equipment is the work of the several members of the company. Each is a capable actor, having an intelligent conception of the character portrayed. That hesitancy in delivery so noticeable in many stock organizations on first performances is absent in this company, showing careful stuly and a retentive memory.

Albert Phillips as Father Whalen, the lovable priest, who is always helping the poor, administering to the sick and disentangling the skeins of love in the lives of his young parishioners, gave a splendid interpretation of the character, following closely the delineation made famous by Mr. Sully. All the little mannerisms of the originator of the character were presented with fidelity and added considerably to the success of his performance.

Of the supporting company only the highest praise can be given for their work. Every little detail was presented faithfully and all seemed to have the success of the production in view. "The Parish Priest" should attract theatregoers who appreciate a pretty play. During the week the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

STANDARDIZING THE COLORS OF FACTORY PIPES.

The multiplication of pipes in factories and other establishments is a source of much confusion, and may result in serious mistakes. By a new German plan, which is meeting with much approval, such pipes are painted with distinguishing colors.

It is proposed to use green for water pipes, yellow for gas, blue for air, white for steam, black for tar, rose for lye, brown for oil, gray for vacuum, and rose with red streaks for acids.

Stripes on the pipes may add further information. Red stripes, for instance, may indicate danger, black would stand for impurity, white for the presence of some steam and green for the presence of water.

Arrows may point out the direction of flow of liquids in the pipes. The same colors can be used in making drawings, and each color would soon become generally recognized as meaning always the same thing.

DECIDUOUS ROOTS OF DESERT PLANTS.

Most perennial desert plants, it appears, have two kinds of roots—one being permanent and the other being shed each year, just as the leaves are dropped from plants of suspended winter activity.

W. A. Cannon, of the Carnegie Institution's desert laboratory, states that these deciduous rootlets appear near the surface of the soil at the beginning of the rainy season, and their purpose seems to increase the water absorption during the season of maximum water supply.

As the surface of the soil again dries, these rootlets dry up and disappear.

LABOR LEADERS HELD GUILTY

Samuel Gompers and Associates Again Convicted in Buck Stove Case—Gompers Indignant.

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 24.—Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and John Mitchell, the labor leaders, were to-day held guilty of contempt of court by the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in connection with a court's injunction in the Buck Stove and Range boycott case. They will attempt to appeal again to the supreme court of the U. S., which reversed their former conviction.

Justice Wright sentenced Gompers to one year, the same as upon his previous conviction, but sentenced Morrison to six months. John Mitchell was sentenced to nine months. His first sentence was six months.

In its previous review of the case, the U. S. supreme court reversed the conviction on the ground that the contempt proceedings had been improperly instituted. New proceedings were at once begun.

The charge was that the three men, as officers of the American Federation of Labor, thru the organization's official publication, had disregarded Justice Gould's injunction against the publication of the Buck Stove and Range Company's name in its boycott list.

After Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, had been sentenced to-day in the contempt case, he attacked the decision, declaring that while Justice Wright lives in our time, his decision and sentences disclose a mental concept of more than two centuries ago, when the workman was either a slave or a serf.

"Information just came to me that the decision was completed more than a month ago, but withheld until after the close of the Chicago Republican National Convention. If true, the inference is obvious," he said.

Twenty Cannibal Kings Wanted American Wife

Of absorbing interest is the romance of the jungle unfolded by Miss Vera Simonton, a modern pioneer in petticoats, who returned to civilization a short time ago, after spending a year in the West African cannibal country, on the line of the equator, and who is now engaged in writing a novel founded upon her experiences, entitled "Hell's Playground," which will shortly be published.

Miss Simonton had many adventures and queer experiences, and relates with amusement how, during her twelve months' sojourn in the herat of the African continent, she had twenty proposals—and all from cannibal kings. Miss Simonton penetrated regions where no white woman had before been seen, and her arrival created a great sensation among the natives.

The first proposal she received was from Oruugu, a Nkomi chief, who came loaded with gifts of knives, tom-toms, beads, and quaint musical instruments, and offered them to Miss Simonton if she would become his thirteenth wife. She endeavored to parley with him by pointing out, with the aid of an interpreter, that thirteen was an unlucky number on which he offered to dismiss one of his other wives and she could be the twelfth. But the offer was declined as diplomatically as possible.

On another occasion a native chief named Akanda sent a proposal thru a delegation consisting of three native women, one of whom proved to be the keeper of his other wives, and the two others her assistants.

Miss Simonton mentions the curious fact that the native chiefs whom she refused seemed to think that she rejected their proposals because she was not fat enough. She says that in the course of her travels in the jungle she found that, when a slim girl from ten to fourteen was betrothed, she was put into the fattening-house and forced to eat bananas all day long; and that no native girl who does not possess an abundance of adipose tissue cares to become a bride.

All sorts of gifts were offered to this intrepid lady if she would consent to make her home in the jungle—a dead snake, an elephant's ear, alligator's eggs, skins of wild animals, carved ebonies and ivories, and gorillas were among the most remarkable gifts proffered.

Altho her position was extremely dangerous at times, on account of the hostility of the natives, Miss Simonton quaintly remarks, apropos of her extraordinary marriage proposals: "I felt like a little girl in a strange ring-a-ring-a-rosy game, with the ring made-up of twenty kings and their astonishing engagement presents."
