HOWLAND.

They said that Howland was "a man of dreams,"
Whose large ideas were phantasms of the brains;
"No force executive," and yet 'tis plain
That they who thought so were befooled. It seems
That these half-friends will now seek other themes
On which to air their fancy. Thinkers sane
Know that these "dreams" are that thereby men gain
True insight—so no need to scribble reams!

A brain that a campaign could thus devise
Is no bad tool, and in the civic hall
May prove its temper; standing like a wall
Against the mediocrity of the unwise,
Who up to this have held our rights in thrall;
God send they may live proud before our eyes!

—BERNARD McEVOY.
