present visiting this country, rather that Canada is losing $2,000,000 a year by not making proper use of the guts, tripe, liver, etc., of slaughtered animals. It will be remembered that he asserted that while Canadians thus threw away $1.65 on every beast they killed, the Americans and Australians carefully saved these articles and sold them on the English market. Now we are given to understand that Mr. Webb is a big factor in the English meat business, and what he says is therefore the more interesting. n conversation with The World on ner contention, pointed out that big rms who handle nothing but the offal of slaughtered cattle, and maintained that a Canadian company established for the same purpose could succeed abundantly. No large capital would be required and the earnings would equal 50 per cent. per annum on the capital, if they did not even actually exceed the capital.

Such a company, with headquarters in Toronto, Mr. Webb says, should collect from the butchers all the offal, fat and bones, and ship the tripe, guts, iver, hearts and tongues to London. And the fat could be turned into oleo and sent to London as a basis for oleo-

Figures Largely Exaggerated. tors and managers are inclined to re sent the views expressed by Mr. Webb. The manager of one of the larges abattoirs in Toronto was interviewed on the subject. He ridiculed the state ments of Mr. Webb and asserted that his figures were so largely exaggerated that, if they were true, every Canadian packing institution would be in the hands of the bankruptcy court.

has no equal as a saver of time and money for the buying and selling of goods from distant points.

The travelling salesman found this out long ago. Others are learning the same than the liver and hearts of the same of the bankruptcy court.

"It can be accepted as an original proposition that Canadian packing institution would be in the hands of the bankruptcy court.

"It can be accepted as an original proposition that Canadian packing heures are operated on the most economic and scientific principles," he declared. "If this were not the case it would not be possible for the business to be earted on at all, so close is the margin of profit. Talk about losing food products to the value of two million dolars annually in the dead meat trade! The idea is preposterous and makes the person responsible for such a statement perfectly ridiculous among those familiar with the situation. The trade would not permit the packer to make so much as a $1.65 profit on one carcase, to say nothing of wasting that amount and then being able to make a profit sufficient to keep in business. As a matter of fact we lose nothing but the squeal of a beast. In truth, we get more out of the liver and tripe and intestines than they do in England, in proportion to the price of meat generally in the two countries. It has been the custom, they do in England, in proportion to the price of meat generally in the two countries. It has been the custom, they do in the price of meat generally in the two countries in the city where a packing house is established, the liver and hearts.

Sell Livers and Hearts.

"The livers and hearts of those carcases shipped out of the city, we of course sell and get as high a price for, in proportion as they do in the section from which Mr. Webb comes. We could sell five hundred more livers daily if we could get them. The same is true of the tripe. We get 25 cents each for tripe here. The offal is scientifically handled and the final disposition is used for sausage packages, as elsewhere. Our rendering establishments are far in advance of those of England. Mr. Webb cannot hope to tell the people of the new world anything new about this business. We ship to the Atlantic coast and five hundred miles west. Sell Livers and Hearts.

ship to the Atlantic coast and five hundred miles west.

American Methods Not Superior.

"He talks of the superiority of American methods compared with ours. This is folly. Why, we have in our establishment as foreman one of the most expert men we could employ at high wages from the biggest packing house in Chicago, Any methods of the Chicago packing houses which we find an improvement over ours we instantly copy. Then, too, we know all about what Canadian packers can do in the live meat trade of Europe. We have tried it and we know more about the business in a practical way than Mr. Webb can hope to tell us. In the first place the American packers admit themselves that they only ship dead meat to Europe to dispose of the surplus and to keep the home market evenly balanced. We have not the same excuse, for we have a home market for the full capacity of our plants. One must consider the relative difference in the volume of the packing house business here and in the United States. At the same time they have no labor-saving device or economic system that does not obtain right here in Toronto.

Business Done on Close Margin.

Business Done on Close Margin.

"Among men familiar with the intricacies of the trade it is no secret that the packing house business is done on an exceedingly close margin, and no packer would remain in business who wasted a cent's worth of offal or other products of the slaughtered animals. The idea of Mr. Webb's talking about the tripe being another article for the waste tub in Canada! A manager that would throw away products which have been recognized as commercially valuable in Canada for a quarter of a century would be considered a fool. With the most skilful American packing house people working in Canadian plants, how would it be possible for such a difference in the methods, as Mr. Webb claims exists, to continue? The only difference in the United States packing plants and those of Canadias the difference between the capacity of eighty millions of people and six millions. Scientifically and economically the Canadian Business Done on Close Margin those of Canada is the difference be-tween the capacity of eighty millions of people and six millions. Scientifi-cally and economically the Canadian packing is done in an up-to-date man-ner. It can be taken for granted that when we send our refuse to the fertil-izing department all the substance of a commercial value along other lines. a commercial value along other lines has been exhausted."
