appelli ,an art critic, has discovered among the figures what he considered was originally a portrait of Dante-Signor Chiappelli's opinion has been opposed, but he now supports it by the fact that the portrait holds a book which is evidently the "Divine Comedy." If Chiappelli is right we now have for the first time an authentic likeness of the great poet.

New York Commercial: We have a few small troubles of our own anent street car travel—or, more properly, in New York travel, for there are several disagreeable ways of getting to business—but there are others. Because misery loves company, perhaps, we are glad to comment on them. Our principal grievance is the lack of facilities; our principal discomfort is of the sardine kind. Now, in Toronto, for instance, the people are not packed in a car after the style of Turkish figs, as here, but they are frozen into a species of icicle in going to and from. The climate is of the frigid sort, which the railway company attempts to soften by a stove in each car. Exits and entrances are made at either door, with the result that the interior of the car. notwithstanding the stove, is usually of the same temperature as the outer air. The moral is, it is a very excellent, up-to-date city that hears no oriticism of its street railways.

Charged With Killing His Son. Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 25.—Patrick Gorman, aged 68, whose home is in a log cabin near Monroe Centre, was arrested yesterday by the sheriff and held to await inquiry into the death of his son John, aged 40. The old man lived with his three sons, John, Patrick, jr., and James. When James got home from work last evening he found home from work last evening he found John dead from a gunshot wound. The old man said a stranger had killed John, but contradictory statements about the gun used, and which belonged to the father, led to his arrest.

Albany, N.Y., Jan. 25.—Kalman Stark, a Hungarian, made a desperate attempt to shoot President John W. McNamara of the United Traction Company of this city last night. Mcsailant is in custody. Stark i
