A broad declaration favorable to the exemption of private property at sea in time of war is not unlikely, as it seems to be generally agreed that this principle should be embodied in international law.

The question which is likely to take up much of the time of the Congress is that of the extension of the principle of settling international disputes by arbitration, which will be introduced by the chief of the American delegation, Joseph H. Choate, formerly U. 3. ambassador to Great Britain. The instructions to that gentleman and his colleagues in this connection are known to be explicit. They are to do everything in their power to influence the Congress to enlarge the powers of the permanent Hague tribunal in dealing with arbitration cases, to endeavor ities will not employ him.
