How Exchange Benefits the Investor

The continued rise in the premium on New York exchange serves to illustrate the advisability of buying the securities of those companies selling their products in the United States and receiving payment therefor

We can, at the moment, offer the well secured First Mortgage Bonds of such a company. Its earnings from New York exchange alone, at present rates, would be equal to three times the entire bond interest, or a surplus after bond interest equivalent to 10% on Common Stock. In addition, the ordinary manufacturing profits of the Company will add materially to the surplus available for Common.

We are offering these Bonds with a substantial bonus in Common Stock, enabling the investor to secure an immediate interest return of 8% or over (7% plus New York exchange) and a share in the surplus profits of the Company through the Common Stock bonus.

New York exchange is higher to-day than at any period in the last five years, and indications are that the premium on New York funds will be a factor for some years and not a temporary state of affairs as some have thought. Write us to-day.
