

MARCH.

There is no deception now, Mr. Weller.—“Tears,” said Job, with a look of momentary slyness, “tears are not the only proofs of distress, nor the best ones.” “No they aint,” replied Sam, expressively. “They may be put on, Mr. Weller,” said Job. “I know they may,” said Sam, “some people, indeed, has ’em always ready laid on, and can pull out the plug whenever they likes.”—[Pickwick.]

In every profession, every individual affects to appear just what he would willingly be esteemed—so that we may say the world is composed but of appearances.

Small geniuses are hurt by small events. Great geniuses see through and despise them.

Perfect valeur consists in doing without a witness all that we should be capable of doing in the face of the whole world.

Justice consists in doing injury to no man; decency, in offending none.—[Tully.]
