F. E. I.-I have a two-year-old helfer that calved about two months ago. Since then she has had a cough, is in fair order, but does not seem to gain in flesh or milk. Gives about five quarts at a milking. The milk seems rich and of a good color, but deposits bloody sediment after standing forty eight hours. Please advise.

Ans.-For a two-year-old your cow is milking very well indeed, in fact is is too great a strain on her system, and she is probably debilitated by it. For the cough give her daily boiled lin-seed, also one ounce of tincture of belladonna. The bloody deposit comes from irritation of the udder. Bathe daily with warm water and do not feed grain or short feed for a few weeks and it will probably disappear.

Ans.—Would be afraid of tubercu losis. Do not use the milk and sepa rate her from the other cattle. Have her examined for tuberculosis.

Farmer.—I lost a very fine Ayrshire calf a few days ago with some strange disease. The symptoms were as fol lows: Seemed feverish and off its feed and lame in one fore leg. The leg swelled up into the shoulder and it seemed as if air had got beneath the skin and puffed it out. I called in a veterinary surgeon. He did not know what the trouble was, but he lanced it and a little black blood came, also tubbles of air. The calf did not seem to mind being lanced. Kindly let me now what the trouble was.
