

GEO. T. BOLTON DROWNED, ED. HIPWELL NEARLY LOST IN BRAVE EFFORT TO SAVE Boat Sank Under Young Fishermen in Lattimer Lake

Hipwell Aided Bolton to Within Ten Yards of Shore When He Lost Hold and Sank—Hipwell, Overcome by Companion's Death, Came Near to Being Drowned Also.

George A. Bolton, aged twenty-two years, son of George Bolton, driver of the special delivery team of Manchester, was drowned in Lattimer Lake Friday morning, while a companion, Edward T. Hipwell, who is about nineteen years old, was saved from a similar fate only by the timely efforts of a spectator of the catastrophe, and in so exhausted a state that for a time he was in a serious condition.

The young men had put off for quite a distance into the lake when, of a sudden, their boat, which had been looking from the start, sank under them and left them struggling in very deep water. Assisted by his companion, who is a good swimmer, Bolton had reached within some ten yards of the shore when his grasp on Hipwell's shoulder relaxed and he sank before the latter could assist him further, while the survivor, almost crazed by his companion's fate, lost the presence of mind which had almost enabled him to struggle further, was dragged to the bank completely worn out in body and mind, wrought up over his friend's death.

Such, in brief, was the tragic end of a fishing trip planned and looked forward to by both young men as their means of enjoying Victoria day.

Survivor Tells of His Awful Experience.

The story of the accident was told to a Telegraph reporter by the survivor at a residence, 533 Esplanade street, Friday evening. Both had left the city Thursday night intending to fish at the Eastern Lakes. They arrived at their destination some hours later, and cast their lines for a night's sport. Not being very successful, the question of seeking elsewhere for fish arose and, in the ensuing conversation, it was said that quite a number of fish were being taken at Lake Lattimer, so the search was made for the lake, leaving the Eastern Lakes about 2 o'clock Friday morning. They struck the rocky road at Taylor's residence and, proceeding along for about a mile, reached the fatal lake about 4 o'clock Friday morning.

On Lake Lattimer there are some camps, wooden camps leased to pleasure or outing parties for the season or a shorter term. One of these is owned by Mrs. Mary Ann McManus, whose residence is but a short distance to the west of the lake. The camp was in use yesterday by a couple of young fellows from the city, and it was situated near the head of the lake, a short distance below the one where the party from Lake Lattimer entered the water.

A little before 10 o'clock Friday morning the occupants of the camp left the lakeside intending to go to McDonald's Brook. "I said," continued Mr. Hipwell, "Come on, Bolton, and we'll have a fish." A boat painted blue was lying at the camp. It had been there all winter, and appeared quite sound. We put it in the water and it began to leak, but," continued he, "we felt that we could bail it out faster than the water would come in. Why, I've been in a boat which was full with water when I left the shore.

"We pulled out quite a distance from the shore, just opposite to the pipe line, and put down the anchor, but we had no sooner got moored than the water began to come in faster and the boat began to sink. I called out to pull up the anchor and take the oars to make for the shore, but we had hardly moved a boat length when the water was up to our waists.

Continuing, Mr. Hipwell said that his companion, even free from his clothing, could swim at the best only a few yards, but, encumbered as he was by the weight of his garments, he was almost helpless. Hipwell says that he himself had two suits of underclothing, the water began to come in faster and the boat began to sink. I called out to pull up the anchor and take the oars to make for the shore, but we had hardly moved a boat length when the water was up to our waists.

At the time of the drowning a couple of other boats were on the lake, while a short distance away from the boat which sank, the boat was witnessed by those who were using the latter boat and while one of them pulled for the men the other ran along the shore. This latter one, Mr. Carpenter, a driver for Manchester, Robertson Allison, Ltd., it was who waded out and thrust to Hipwell the stick by means of which he was saved. Hipwell's watch was stopped at 9:55 o'clock, presumably just the time that they entered the water.

The Body Recovered.

News of the drowning soon spread and about noon a telephone message was sent from Barker's to the police station and also to Coroner Berryman. One of the M. R. A.'s teams, also Mr. Barnaby and others of the firm went out and efforts to locate the unfortunate young man were made. John Fitzgerald, whose property faces on the lake near to the scene of the catastrophe, put out in his boat and began pulling. About 3 o'clock on Friday morning the body was recovered and was drawn to the surface and placed in the camp, where it was viewed by Coroner Berryman. He gave permission to the coroner to remove the body and it was brought to the saddest home by Undertaker Chamberlain.

The victim of the sad affair was employed as a salesman with Manchester, Robertson Allison, Ltd. Hipwell works there also and the two were close friends. The latter was a quiet, industrious young man, whose pleasing ways made him many friends. He was the eldest son of George Bolton and besides his father and mother had two brothers, Harry, and three sisters—Annie May, Margaret J., and Lydia Beatrice. The family live in Peters street. They will have the sincere sympathy of the community in their affliction. All who knew the deceased speak highly of him.

Hipwell is a grandson of Police Sergeant John Hipwell and son of John P. Hipwell, of the railway mail service.

Lake Lattimer is very deep and the bank a short distance from the shore goes off abruptly and for a considerable depth. It is on the Hickey Road about a mile in from Treadwell's. It is now included in the new water supply system for St. John. There has not before been a drowning accident there for years.

Coroner Berryman has decided that an inquest is not necessary, as death was the result of an accident.

CRIMEAN VETERAN FOUND DEAD IN SOUTH BAY FIELD

Hiram V. Wetmore Dies of Heart Trouble While Planting Potatoes—Enjoyed Pension for Specially Brave Act When a Powder Boy.

Hiram V. Wetmore, a veteran of the Crimean war, was found dead in his field at South Bay Friday, about 5:30 p. m. It is supposed he died suddenly of heart trouble. Dr. M. A. Macfarlane, the coroner, viewed the body and ordered it removed to Mr. Wetmore's residence. No inquest will be held.

The discovery was made by Thomas Logue, a son of Edward Logue, who resides in the vicinity. Mr. Wetmore had been out planting potatoes in his field and when the body was found it was lying face downwards with a fork still held in one hand.

Mr. Wetmore was the hero of an episode during the Crimean war which brought him into distinction when only a lad in his teens and earned for him a life pension. He was born at Yarmouth (N. S.) July 2, 1843, and joined the royal navy as a powder monkey on the outbreak of the struggle between England and Russia. He served with his ship in the Black Sea at the siege of Sevastopol and on one occasion, when a live shell fell on the deck, picked it up and threw it into the sea. The incident is referred to in many histories of the campaign.

At the close of the war the crews were given a dinner at which Queen Victoria granted the head of the table. Young Wetmore, on that occasion, was presented to her late majesty and the queen is said to have expressed her interest in him.

SIXTY YEARS MARRIED: MANY GOOD WISHES

Memorable Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. William Peters, Waterloo Street

RECEPTION HELD
Groomsmen of Sixty Years Ago, and Brother of Mrs. Peters, Among Those Who Called to Offer Congratulations—Large Number of Relatives and Friends Present.

Mr. and Mrs. William Peters, of Waterloo street, Monday celebrated the 60th anniversary of their wedding. They were waited on in the course of the day by a very large number of their friends and relatives, who attended them their hearty congratulations on the occasion.

In spite of their years, both Mr. and Mrs. Peters looked quite hale and hearty. Two very interesting visitors during the day were C. A. Everett, of the firm of C. & E. Everett, who acted as groomsmen at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Peters, and Jacob Underhill, brother of Mrs. Peters. These are the only two now alive being the principals who were at the wedding, the bride and groom having died some years ago.

Mr. Peters said Monday night that sixty years ago the law was different to what it is now and only a few of the Reformed Baptist clergymen were authorized to celebrate weddings. He was anxious to secure one of that denomination to perform the ceremony and wrote to a clergyman who lived in Oromocto. The letter, however, failed to reach its destination and as a consequence the services of Rev. Mr. Rice, at that time a Methodist minister here, were secured.

IOWA FARMS

They Have the Proud Record of Not One Crop Failure in Fifty Years.

(Farmington.)
Within the borders of Iowa is an area of more than 35,000,000 acres, fully ninety-five per cent. of which is arable land which may be made to produce something of value. No other state in the union has so large a percentage of its domain available for agriculture.

This great body of fertile soil is divided into approximately 20,000 farms with an average of 1500 acres. Of the total number of farms, sixty-five per cent. are occupied by the owners and thirty-five per cent. by renters.

Practically without exception all of these farms are devoted to the joint production of crops and live stock. This system of farm management tends to maintain the fertility of the soil, and it is a well known fact that the live stock farms of Iowa have apparently not as yet been reduced in productive capacity even in the smallest measure. Commercial fertilizers have not found a market in Iowa and not one farmer in a thousand knows anything about the nature of the soil.

From an agricultural point of view the most important feature of the climate of Iowa is that the maximum of rainfall comes in the crop season, April to September, inclusive, in the six crop months the average rainfall is 22.48 inches, or seventy-one per cent. of the normal rainfall. In the four most critical months, May 1 to Sept. 1, the average for the state is 16.25 inches, or fifty-one per cent.

Although there are fluctuations in the amount of rainfall, the records of the past half century show that the average rainfall is not only fairly good crops have been produced in the driest or wettest seasons.

The London Christian World describes a very valuable manuscript which was recently discovered in the library of the church of the Mother of God, at Eriwan, in the Transcaucasia. It is an Armenian translation of a treatise by Irenaeus, bishop of Lyons, in the latter half of the second century of the Christian era. It was probably written A. D. 180. It contains a definition of Christian doctrine, a sketch of the history of revelation from the beginning of the age of the prophets, an outline of the scheme of redemption as foretold in the Old Testament with an examination of passages held to refer to Christ, and a brief summing up, with a warning against heresies. Great stress is laid on the Virgin Birth of Jesus.

CORONER GRANTS WARRANT FOR WOMAN'S BURIAL

Case of Woman Who Died in River Steamer Brings Out Matters at Issue Between Coroners and Municipal Council—Dr. Roberts Talks of It.

The death of Mrs. Margaret Hamilton, which occurred on Saturday morning as she was being cradled aboard the steamer May Queen at Indiantown wharf, was the means of bringing prominently into notice the trouble between the coroners and the municipal council regarding the viewing of bodies and the matter of expense.

On Friday's American boat, Mrs. Hamilton arrived in the city from Palmer (Mass.), where she had been taken ill, and as she had expressed a desire to die in her native place, she was being taken home to Hampstead by her son, George Armstrong. She spent the night in the Ferris Hotel, Indiantown, but while being taken aboard the steamer May Queen, Saturday, Mrs. Hamilton was seventy-two years of age.

When it was found that she was no more, undertaker Brennan was called upon to prepare the body. Mr. Brennan arrived and set about securing a burial permit. He asked a physician, but the latter was in no position to grant one. The board of health was also asked for a permit, but that body refused to issue a permit without a doctor's certificate or a coroner's warrant. Death took place early in the morning and the body was placed in the May Queen warehouse.

Coroner Roberts was asked to view the body, but it was reported that he refused at first. In plenty of time for the body to be taken up river on the steamer Elaine, however, as was planned, Coroner Roberts viewed the body and allowed it to be removed.

Coroner Explains Position.
In an interview with Coroner Roberts Sunday evening, a Telegraph reporter was given some interesting information regarding Saturday's case and the duty of coroners in general. The coroner told of Mr. Brennan calling him up and asking that something be done in the matter. He says Mr. Brennan rang him up at 6:20 o'clock Saturday morning and asked him to view the body. He had replied to Mr. Brennan, "Do you know that the council considers the views of Coroner Roberts entirely unnecessary?"

"As far as I know," said the coroner, this was just as unnecessary as any other cases for which a bill had been rendered. I told Mr. Brennan this and told him to ask the board of health, and he said that he had done so and had failed."

Coroner Roberts says he then told Mr. Brennan, "If I find this case deserving of a certificate, you'll get it, but in the meantime let the matter run its course according to the idea of the municipal council."

BLISSVILLE MAN IS SERIOUSLY BURNED

Abraham Banks, Lighting Pipe Set Fire to Cloth on Which Was Rheumatism Liniment.

As a result of an accident peculiar in character and serious in consequences, Abraham Banks, of Central Blissville, is confined to his bed by extensive and painful burns to his legs, arms and face. He had been suffering from rheumatism in his leg and was in the habit of rubbing the limb with spirits of turpentine each night before retiring.

One night last week he had finished this and threw the cloth he had used upon the floor. On lighting his pipe, he dropped the burning match on the cloth and the inflammable material quickly ignited, and caught the rage on his leg. Mr. Banks endeavored to put out the flames with his oil covered hands, but was terribly burned. His hands were cooked and his legs were also badly scorched before he succeeded in subduing the flames.

Dr. A. J. Murray, of Fredericton Junction, was quickly summoned, and hopes to be able to save the man's limbs. Mr. Banks is employed in the mill of Smith Bros., Ltd., and eleven small children are dependent upon him for support.

Funeral of Mrs. Jas. Jessop, Jr.
Newport, Que., May 27.—(Special)—The funeral of Laura A. Lavoie, wife of James Jessop, Jr., mayor, took place today from her residence. Father Lebel as deacon, and Rev. Father St. Laurent, officiating as master of ceremonies, assisted by Rev. Father Nakelle and Martin.

The funeral was one of the largest ever witnessed in the parish. Among others present were noticed Dr. and Mrs. Enright, Port Daniel; Mr. and Mrs. McNaughton, Pales Mills; Mr. and Mrs. Ahern, Grand River; Mrs. Baker and Miss Jessop, Dalhousie (N. B.); Mr. and Mrs. Myles, Pales Mills; Messrs. Cain, Perre, Poirer, Shugavale, Mr. Romed, Newport Point; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lemarquand, Newport Islands; Mr. and Mrs. Elias Lemarquand, Newport Point.

Lost Coroner Roberts' after thirty-four years of service as British representative in Egypt. He did for the Klievde as Joseph did for Pharaoh. I pursued the civil service, reformed army, modernized communications, put life, energy, hope and courage into the corrupt and debilitated nation. By few has the "white man's burden" been borne so well.
