OBITUARY

Wilson's Beach. Oct. 26.—Death came quite suddenly to Capt. C. Henry Greenwood on Tuesday last. He had been in failing health for some time but no one suspected the end was so near, as he had never engaged in any business about the house and was able to perform all his duties. He was a member of the United Brethren church and was a deeply religious man. He was born in Scotland and came to this country when a young man. He was a successful business man and a generous benefactor to his community. He is survived by his wife and several children.

There's a little bit of hunting that they love. Through the rolling of the years, British blood and British tears, Made it one of England's freedom, England's love. There's a stern and silent spirit on the deep, Mother's lullaby unbroken, Danger's murmurings unspoken, While the star of England's navy guards the deep. Close your eyes, each child of Freedom, Go to sleep, Lie some never-falling star, They're the boys that never number, They're the boys who fear no number, England's silent sleepers on the deep.

ADVANCE DELAYED TO CARE FOR WOUNDED. Petrograd, Oct. 29, via London, 10.55 p.m.—The correspondent of the Retch and the German dead and carting the burning of the villages on the lower regions of the San river frightful conditions prevail. All the available buildings, including the Marie monasteries, are crowded with Austrian wounded and dying. Many of these men, the correspondent says, were left behind by the fleeing Austrians without having received any medical attention.

"The Russian advance was delayed," continues the correspondent, "owing to the necessity of attending to the burning of the wounded, who had fared badly at the hands of a few unskilled nurses and priests. The wounded deserted by the Austrians materially augmented the list of prisoners taken. Among the prisoners are many Turkish inhabitants of Bosnia.
