City Police Court.

Two of the three in the dock this morning, went to the station for protection.

Edward Elliott said he froze his feet across the river and could not work. He was told to go back or he would find himself in duress of law.

William Kelly, an Irishman, but lately from Boston, claimed protection. His hair was cut very close and looked peculiar. "You've had a close cut," said the Magistrate. "Yes, your Honor, I had had the eyelashes and had to have it cut," said Kelly, "or I'll send you where you will have to work. I will provide laborers for the Dominion Government, and they will load you where the hair is always cut short."

Andrew Lane was charged with stealing twelve cents worth of gin from Wm. Smith's bar-room, King Square. He confessed taking the gin from the boy, but said he intended returning and paying for it. He had two children, pleaded to be let off, and said he would never come back for the Court again. The police gave him a very bad character, and said he and two other colored boys robbed and abused any drunken man they could see. He was sent to the Penitentiary for three months.

Patrick Kelly, charged by policeman Evans with impeding him in the discharge of his duty, yesterday afternoon went to the Police Court and withdrew his plea of not guilty, and entered one of guilty. The Magistrate, in consideration of his widowed mother, allowed the policeman to withdraw the charge.
