MODERN SPIES OF PEACE. How Nations Discover What They Must Know in Their Neighbors' Territory, But Are Not Allowed To.

There are many things about each other which nations would like to know, says the London Express correspondent.

In order to discover what they must know but are not allowed to, civilized States employ military spies. They may be Military or Naval Attaches, duly accredited to an Embassy, or secret agents, who are sent to reside or travel in those districts from which information is reddired by the Intelligence Department.

The work of the first class is not unimportant, but it is not risky. The officer may not overstep the bounds of common honesty, and rarely, if ever, attempts to achieve anything

He is closely watched, and knows it. If he becomes a strong centre of attraction he may divert the attention of watchers from some secret agent who is possessing himself of the particulars the Attache is ostensibly so anxious to acquire, but is successfully prevented from securing. The Attache is useful as a clearing agent. He is closely watched, and knows

Spies become possessed of facts which are of no real value to those who employ them, but are assumed to be worth much by the agents of other countries, and an exchange of 'pieces' is effected. Sometimes apparently useless information is sought simply for its exchange value. For instance, some years ago two British officers created considerable annoyance in Russia by their per-sistence in hanging about the dis-trict in which the autumn manoeuvres were to take place.

Then representations were made at the British Embassy, where the officers were unknown, and subsequently they disappeared for a time, only to be discovered at the end of the man-ocuvres in one of the five great fort-resses which protect the west fron-tier of Russia, and the one that had been the centre of the military opera-

Had these men been Prussian officers their position would have been dangerous, and an unpleasant interdangerous, and an unpleasant international incident might have occurred. The Russo-German frontier is nothing to Great Britain, neither is the Franco-German. We exchange the first "piece" with Germany for the second, and the second with France for a little bit of news about Russia in Asia which India believes to be important. And thus we get home. Each country has its own peculiar.

Each country has its own peculiar sphere of interest to which it devotes its greatest attention. Great Britain has so many that, properly speaking, it has none. But India is always alarmed as to Russia; and agents—British and native—of the India Repartment are ever busy seek-ing particulars likely to be of ser-vice when we have to defend an Empire which already in the military sense extends from Aden to Hong Kong.

Most of the Indian agents in Russia are officers of the Indian army but, needless to state, they do not travel as such. Some affect to be tourists of an innocent but inquiring turn of mind; some go as commercial travelers; some lean to religious propagenda; while others collect curiosities.

These agents have been so energetic and prolific in their disguises that in the South of Russia the page fide commercial traveler exites bona-fide commercial traveler excites suspicion. The Russians now insist upon all "commercials" being licens-ed and taxed; moreover, the Intelli-gence Department has found the orgoods obtained and mewhat embarrassing. ders for goods obtained by its travelers somewhat embarrassing.

As a buying agent the spy has also worked well. No Briton can now go across the Caspian to purchase skins any more than to sell hardware or even just to amuse himself, without his letters being opened and the com-pany he keeps carefully noted. In ordinary circumstances, when the spy is known, he thereby becomes the spy is known, he thereby becomes innocuous, and he knows it. If discovered, the impolite Russian way is to forbid him to enter the country of the countr try, or to declare he comes from a plague-infested port, or that he is a Roman Catholic or a Jew.

The polite way is to offer him a guard, or helpmate, or companion. The spy is then shown what he must see, and as soon as he has seen and reported, the various military dispositions are changed so that the information he obtains is worse than useless being actually worse than useless, being actually worse than useless, being actually misleading.

The polite British way is to take the recognized spy round the golf links, or give him pegs of whiskey and tell him soft stories as he sits on a stool enjoying (?) interminable regimental cricket, then to send or take him home a happy, talkative man with nothing to tell.

Many are the dodges resorted to by British agents in order to avoid being "spoofed" by their Russian hosts. Their common way is to hunt in couples, each independent of the other so that if one is taken the other may still succeed in getting through with the work.

In the Far East in the matter of espionage, Japan has the game al-

In the Far East in the matter of espionage, Japan has the game almost to itself. A Japanese can readily become so good an imitation of the Chinaman, Manchu, or Mongol that the Russian cannot identify him, and the Chinaman who does will certainly not denounce him.

He can simulate ignorance, almost imbediity—which the Russian spy is too vain to do—and as merchant, artisan, or interpreter he can go any—tisan, or interpreter he can go anywhere. Then there are the women! The Japanese amah, apparently stupid and ignorant as a German goose-

SIR ROBERT STOUT ANGRY

Why the Chief Justice of New Zealand

Sir Robert Stout, Chief Justice of Sir Robert Stout, Chief Justice of New Zealand, who is threatening resignation because the King has decided that Ministers in future must have precedence over Judges in that colony, is almost as assertive and determined a personality as Mr. Sedden himself. He and Mr. Sedden were the rival candidates for the Liberal leadership after the death of Mr. Ballance, and there was pretty general surprise when the caucus degeneral surprise when the caucus de cided against his claims. Cynica people were heard to say that in making him Chief Justice, Mr. Sedden was actuated quite as much by a desire to dispose of a dangerous a desire to dispose of a dangerous rival as to reward pro-eminent professional merit. If Sir Robert should resign and re-enter public life, New Zealand politics will become lively and interesting. Sir Robert, who is a native of the Shetland Islands, and still under sixty, was originally a schoolmaster, but became a barrister at twenty-seven, and a New Zealand M.P three years later. He served as Attorney-General In Sir George Grey's Radical Government of 1878, and attained the Premiership himself in 1884. Before his elevation to the Bench he was the Bradlaugh or the Bench he was the Bradlaugh or the Ingersoll of New Zealand, and he was the leading orator at a Secu-larist Congress in Melbourne.

Fortunes to Get Public Ear.

Let all those of the outside public who read that some eminent vocalist of the concert-room platform, or some astonishing instrumentalist the same is drawing enormous fees, take the word of an expert that there is no effort in the world so difficult and so heartbreaking as that of obtaining the car of the in the way mentioned, says London Tit-Bits

Every season, in London alone, the sums spent by newcomers in their desire to give a concert or to share in one are in the aggregate enormous, and generally the expense only comes as a culmination after both friends and money have been exhausted in paying for a long series of lessons in this country and abroad, during which period the student has during which period the student has never earned a sixpence. But, after years of study, a hearing must be got at any hazard for the novice, and if she be a grl the very dress on her back has often cost an infinite family sacrifice. In too many cases, though, agents have been propitiated and critics have been actually got to come to the concert-room—important concerts often clash on the same day—the result is a deep disappointment, for many a musical genius will break down unmusical genius will break down musical genius will break down under the ordeal and be seen at his or held worst.

From the colonies alone fortunes have poured into London that have been speculatively used in concert-giving in behalf of the tyros, but giving in behalf of the tyros, but some nineteen out of twenty of the aspirants have been, as in the case of home-cultivated variety, compara-tive failures. One of the greatest concert-agents of the world said to the writer: "I have known scores of cases—I mean scores literally—where a student, praised to the skies by professors, has spent ten years of study without earning anything, and has then expended a small fortune in giving experimental concerts, only to find that he or she cannot evem earn a living."

Payment of Genius.

At a recent sale in London "Defoe's Life and Strange Surprising Adventures of Robinson Crusoe, of York, Mariner," and "The Farther Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," two volumes, of 1719, in the original calf bindings, realized $1,585. If such a thing had happened in Defoe's own time it is probable that that gifted romancer would have ended his days in a madhouse, Such incidents are the irony of fate. Every other day one reads of a Poe manuscript having been sold at a large price. And then one remembers Poe's miserable life and ill-paid returns. Shakespeare, a prosperous dramatist, considering his time, would gladly have sold not only the manuscript copy, but dramatic rights to "Hamlet" for scarcely a larger sum than that given above. It is safe to say that the Avon bard, good business man as he was, did not receive from all his plays what a modern "popular" novelist gains from a single book with its dramatic rights. It looks rather unjust, but Shakespeare still lives, while the novelist sees his recutation flickering before his eyes. It is doubtful whether, taking all things into consideration, Mr. Shakespeare would care to change places with M—, you may fill in your own blank.—Current Literature. Payment of Genius. Literature.

A Remarkable Hat.

According to a French paper, there is a man in London who possesses a remarkable straw hat. For years past he has followed King Edward about at foreign watering places, and whenever he saw the Prince of Wales, as the King then was, drinking anything through a straw he pounced down upon the straw and added it to his collection. Last year this strange collector had gathered such a bundle of straws that he had a hat made of them.
