FINE WORD PICTURE OF THE SERVICE IN MEMORY OF CANADIANS AT ST. PAUL'S

The following is the impression of a memorial service to Canadian soldiers at St. Paul's, written by Mrs. G. McL. Brown, wife of the European manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which appeared in the Canadian Gazette, published in London, England, May 20th:
"I sat beneath the great dome of St. Paul's and all about me gathered the people who had come to do homage to Canada's dead. Statesmen, men of high place, admirals of the fleet, generals of divisions, soldiers from the field, royal ladies, sisters, aunts, and women and girls from the factory and the shop—they came an endless throng, to pay their tribute to the fallen. Canadians in the flush and vigor of health had come from their camps; and from the hospitals, with shattered bodies and crippled limbs, came the wounded and the broken.
Fathers, whose hopes lay buried in the grave, mothers, whose only sons had been taken; brides who were in their bloom, met together to share their grief. And the high and the low, the great and the humble, the strong and the weak, the bereaved and the anxious and the distressed, in a solemn hour stood side by side as members of one great family, sharing a common fealty to each other, to their country and to their King.
The glorious music rose and fell, and rose again, as if it would say: "Honor the brave, chant for the dead! Exalt them who pass to their reward!" and organ and drums, and brasses and cymbals, and pipes and reeds and strings, thundered and ed and sang in a mighty unison of praise. Through the iron gates and on to the altar's step, the symbols of their faith borne in front of them, passed the long procession of choir and priests and bishops. The music faltered, hushed and died, and the solemn rite began.
Glory of music and beauty of words, homage of people and tribute of King! How shall these comfort us for they who are dead. They are gone, in the fullness of their strength, and their hopes and their dreams are lying in the dust. For them the promise of the years is not, and in all the days to come we shall know them no more.
"He that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."
"Oh, grief-stricken father, lift up your head! The son of your youth has passed beyond our mortal vision, but still he lives and presses forward the banner of the Lord.
But our hearts are heavy. In the morning and in the night they are tortured and cry out, remembering how, though our love straitened the arms, it could not reach, nor succour, as in blood and agony, they, the brave, went from the light and sweetness of life to the silence of their lonely graves.

"Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, Thou art with me."
Sorrow multiplies our grief, and desolate mother. They were not left alone. Love, greater than yours, upheld them, and around them was the everlasting mercy.
"Oh, sorrowing souls look up! Today and to-morrow the weight of our woe increases, and the earth groans with our anguish. We remember the land across the sea where, even to the borders of another sea, they weep with us for those who will not come again. And to what end. To what end do we bear the burden that presses upon us? For what avails valour and glory and conquest if these our sons are slain?
"Blest are the departed who in the Lord are sleeping. They rest from their labors and their works do follow them."
Oh, sorrowing souls look up! Not alone for woe and glory, for country and King were the lives laid down. It is the battle of Christ we fight. That His message of mercy and love might be pressing most of a stricken world, they, your gallant ones, endured and agonized and died! Rise up! With streaming eyes but steadfast hearts, rise up, and leave them, the consecrated, in their Father's glorious keeping.
Through the vast cathedral poured the sonorous measures of the Dead March. Wave upon wave it soared to the distant arches and echoed about the tombs of the mighty dead. The mingling of the "Last Post" thrilled out, and in the pause we seemed to hear the cry come back, "yea, we are here, we, whose bodies lie around you! We, who of old fought and died, that you who came after might enter into your heritage. Sons of our sons, keep faith." Surely they thrilled those spirits of the departed, when we lifted up our voices and hailed you: "Oh, Canada! land of our birth, young mother of the brave men. And surely they rejoiced, the glorious company of soldiers, saints and martyrs, as we sang anew our Father's song, our battle cry of old: "For Christ and King."
Oh, men of Canada, true descendants of the race which bred you, will have you proved your right to sing that song. The sacred love of altar and of throne flames in you as it flamed in your fathers before you. And again, the love of the loyal and the faith and the honor of their country, and all that they cherish and hold dear, are safe in your hands. Eleanor McLaren Brown.
