CONSERVATIVE LEADERS.

Some of the Liberal papers are very much concerned over the dearth of leaders in the Conservative party. Which reminds us: be fore Hon. J. P. Whitney swept the province on Jan. 25th, 1905, we heard the same sort of croaking,-and not by any means from Liberal sources alone. Mr. Whitney was depreciated and sneeered at meanly by Liberal orators and Liberal editors. He was termed 'a third-rate country lawyer his associate leaders as incompetent nonentition. The Conservatives heard this sort of thing week in and week out, and, we regret to say, many of them were poor-spirited enough to be influ enced by it and to lack confidence in their own political generals. When the independent vote caused by a strong revulsion of public feeling against the utterly discredited Ross Government placed Mr. Whitney and his lieutenants in power in Ontario it was found that the much depreciated country lawyer and his associates were strong, able and honest men, who have given this province the best government it has ever received.

Now the same process of depreciation is in progress. R. L. Borden is belittled by the Liberal papers and there are some Conservatives actually fools enough to be influenced by this mode of political warfare. It is true we do not know how capable an administration Mr. Borden will make because he has never had an opportunity of showing his worth. But we do now that he could not possibly give a worse administration than has been given by the Laurier Government, with its unally fools enough to be influenced by Laurier Government, with its un-broken record of scandals and "wine, women and graft." Mr. Borden is all right and he has plenty of good material for forming clean, honest and capable Cabinet. To argue that the Conservative party does not possess the material to furnish a good government for the Dominion is too childish to be taken seriously. All that is necessary for the Conservatives is to give their support to and place confidence in Mr. Borden and his lieutenants.

The St. Thomas Times says it not generally known, but nevertheless a fact, notes an exchange, tha there are people still living who can remember the time when tomators were raised merely for their beauty. To-day people want something easy to apply, certain in results, and, above all, a clean liniment. When seauty was admired, it was considered like the poisonous oak, dangerous to even handle, except by "dark complected" persons. Years of accomplected persons. Years of accomplected persons. Years of accomplected persons. quaintanceship, however, wore off its superstition, and a few "foolhardy" actually owned up to having tasted the fruit. From this small beginning has gradually grown a use that makes to-day an independent of account of the strong pain than any oily liminent. makes to-day an industry with a combined capital of over thirty mil-lions of dollars, which disburses milsombined capital of over thirty millions of dollars, which disburses millions of dollars to its employes each year and aggregates an output of 240,000,000 cans.

Chopin and Chess.

Chopin and Chess.

There is, perhaps, no sounder musician living than Sir Walter Parratt, the Master of the King's Music, and it would require something of a musical genius to accomplish the feat Sir Walter performed when staying with some musical friends at Tenby some years ago. To while away the evening chess was suggested, and Sir Walter proposed that he should sit at the piano and play from memory, while he opposed two friends on the chess-board at the same time. The challenge was accepted, and, with his back to the board, Sir Walter sat at the piano and played Chopin and Mendelssohn, calling out his moves whenever necessary. He won the game in three-quarters of an hour.

A MATRIMONIAL VOYAGE.

How to Keep a Log Book of Happy

Happenings.
This blissful time of the year, so melo dious with the sound of wedding bells, so fragrant with the scent of orange blossoms, prompts me to tell the bridges, both actual and prospective, about the book my husband and I compiled when we were young-more than twenty years ago-of the delight we took in the making of it then and of the abiding interest and satisfac-

or the abiding interest and satisfac-tion we as well as our three big sons feel in it now.

We had been married nearly three weeks when Darby came home one evening carrying a large and heavy

"What's that?" asked L.

"What's that?" asked I.

"That," said he, giving the thick and substantially bound volume an affectionate thump, "is now a discarded business ledger, but soon will be our matrimony book—yours and mine, dear Joan—our patchwork diary, the daybook of our matrimonial firm."

Accordingly, after we had washed the dishes together, Darby cut out the first few dozen used pages and every twentieth page after that to allow of inserting newspaper cuttings and plotures, while I ransacked writing desk and albums for "matter" for the preliminary two pages—the preface to our life journey together, as it were—and for the first page, the wedding page,

On the opposite page is a tintype of Joan at the tender age of four, lovingly clasping her favorite dolly, a newspaper cutting describing the gradua-tion exercises at Mme. Bouton's school in which Joan shone as valedictorian and the programme of the first con-cert to which she went with Darby. The next page—the wedding day page—holds a bit of silk from Joan's wedding gown and a tiny sprig of maidenhair fern from her bridal bouquet, one of the wedding cards, the newspaper wedding notice, the railway time table by which we tripped it to Niagara, some lovely photographs of the falls and the letter heading of the hotel at which we stopped.

Then comes the neatly drawn floor plan of the tiny flat in which we first went to housekeeping, with all the dif-ferent articles of furniture properly located; pictures cut, in the absence of a camera and consequent photographs from an illustrated article describing streets and buildings in the immediate streets and buildings in the immediate neighborhood of our home, passed and repassed on many happy walks together, and so on through the book until, far on toward the end, a page contains a newspaper cutting from the "extra" telling of the attempt on President McKinley's life, the subsequent account of his death and pictures cut from newspapers of buildings draped in mourning.

Such is our book—to both of us and to our children full of a never failing interest; teeming with associations, funny, sentimental and pathetic and alive with recollections of the honeymoon year in the first tiny flat and the nineteen happy, busy years succeeding it—Brooklyn Eagle. in mourning.
