"Mae'r George is such a beautiful reader, now, I know he 'll stay to read for us,' said Aunt Chloe; "Pears like 't will be much more interestin'."

Chloe; "'pears like 't will be much more interestin."

George very readily consented, for your boy is always ready for anything that makes him of importance.

The room was soon filled with a motley assemblage, from the old grey-headed patriarch of eighty to the young girl and lad of fifteen. A little harmless gossip ensued on various themes, such as where old Aunt Sally got her new red headkerchief, and how missis was a going to give Lizay that spotted muslin gown, when she'd got her new berage made up." and how Mas'r Shelby was thinking of buying a new sorrel colt, that was going to prove an addition to the glories of the place. A few of the worshippers belonged to families hard by, who had got permission to attend, and who brought in various choice scraps of information, about the sayings and doings at the house and on the place, which circulated as freely as the same sort of small change does in higher circles.

After a while the singing commenced, to the evident delight of all present. Not even all the disadvantage of masal intonation could prevent the effect of the naturally fine voices, in airs at once wild and spirited. The words were sometimes the well-known and common hymns sung in the churches about, and sometimes of a wilder, more indefinite character, picked up at camp

The chorus to one of them, which ran-as follows, was sung with great energy and unction: "Die on the field of battle,"
Die on the field of battle,
Glory in my soul."

Another special favorite had oft repeated the words—

"Oh, I'm going to glory—wun't you come along with me? Don't you see the single beck ning, and calling me away? Don't you see the golden city and the evertasting day?"

There were others, which made, incessant mention of "Jordan, s banks," and "Chanan's fields;" and "Che" New Jerusalem; for the negro mind, impassioned and imaginative, always attaches itself to hymnis and expressions of so virid and pistorial container; and, as they song, some laughed, and some cried, and isome other, as if they had hirly gained the other side of the river.

"pears to me," said the trader.

"Haley," said Mr. Shelby, "I hope you'll remember that you promised, on your honourly you wouldn't sell Tom, without knowing what sort of hands he's going into.

"Why, you've just done it, sir," said the trader.

"Why, you've just done it, sir," said the trader.
"Circumstances, you well know, obliged me," said Shelby, haughtily.
"Wal, you know, they may blige me, too," said the trader. "Howsomever, I'll do the very best I can in gettin' Tom a good berth; as to my treating on him bad, you needn't be a grain afeard. If there's anything that I thank the Lord for, it is that I'm never noways cruel."
After the expositions which the tradig had previously given of his humane principles, Mr. Shelby did not feel particularly reassured by these declarations; but as they were the best comfort the case admitted of, he allowed the trader to depart in silence, and betook himself to a solitary digar.

How Banus Purchased The Museum.—In an essay which P. T. Barnum contributed to Freedly? "Treating on Business," he thus allude to the purchase of the Museum:—"In 1841 I purchased the American Museum in New York without a dollar, for I was not worth a dollar in the world. But I was never disheartened; I always felt that I could make money fast enough, if I only set my mind to it, I remember meeting a friend in Broadway a few weeks before I came in possession of the Museum. Well, said and the American Museum. Bug. 1; said he, for he knew I had, no property; what do you intend huying it with 1? Brase, I replied, for allver and gold. I have none.
