H. A. Mackie Declares Grit Faction Controls its Policy.

Joint Meeting At Riviere Qui Barre

Journal's Earlier Support of Reciprocity Provokes Confession.

Riviere Qui Barre, Sept. 6.—Election of this district last night heard the Hon. Frank Oliver and Major W. A. Griesbach debate the reciprocity agreement...

reports from him, which had been made him by courtesy, he picked up the White Book of the United States, containing a report of a special committee on Canadian trade conditions and lauded it to the skies. The best part of the fifteen minutes allotted him by the chairman he spent in declaring that he was allowed to speak for two hours more, he could prove to the satisfaction of the audience that reciprocity was a snake in the grass, and the Minister of the Interior was not the proper person to represent the Edmonton constituency in the House of Commons. But he made no points and contributed nothing to the debate.

Paramount Question is Markets. The Minister of the Interior opened his address on the reciprocity agreement by pointing out that until recent years provincial and federal campaigns had been fought out in the west largely on the one great subject of railroads. But now the country had not only railroads, but competition in railroads. Railroads had been built to take the products of the farm to the market. The question now before the people was the policy of the Laurier Government to open to the people of Canada a free market in the United States for the surplus products. If it was important that competition in railroads be secured that products might be carried to the market at a reduced cost, it was just as necessary that the obstructive tariff of the United States be removed as far as possible that Canadian products might reach the markets of the United States with the least impediment at the lowest cost.

To prove the advantage of the great market which the government sought to open up to the people, Mr. Oliver gave facts and figures with regard to the relative prices in Canada and the United States for the last five years of three of the chief products of the Canadian farm, wheat, barley and cattle. By quoting figures from reliable sources he established conclusively that there would have been great increased profits to the Canadian farmer every year for five years past had there been access for Canadian wheat, barley and cattle to the United States market. The difference in wheat prices between Duluth and Winnipeg, for Fort William delivery, last year on a 100,000 bushel crop would have meant $10,000 more to the wheat growers of western Canada had the American market been open to them. In the market for barley the difference in prices between Canada and the United States was even more marked.

Wide Difference in Price of Cattle. In the price of cattle, the difference between what was paid per hundred weight for prime steers at Winnipeg and at Chicago, allowing one dollar per hundred weight for transportation would have meant in 1907 $18 more on a 1,200 pound steer. In 1908, $24.50 cents more. The increased price of cattle in Canada this year was due to a decrease in the supply which had failed to keep pace with the growing demand owing to low prices paid in the past.

Mr. Oliver declared that if there were anything in the agreement which provided for wider markets, that was injurious to the country, he had yet to hear of it. He would freely admit that if under the Minister of Canada derived a great and important benefit, his abrogation would be an injury to the country, that meant that the existence was a corresponding great benefit to the country.

Major Griesbach opened his reply by stating that if he could agree with the conclusions at which the Minister of the Interior had arrived, neither he nor the Conservative party would be opposing reciprocity. He sought at first to minimize the importance of reciprocity, which he later declared would lead to the ruin and desolation of Canada, by asserting that 90 per cent of farm products which the Canadian farmer produced were consumed in this country and 20 per cent exported abroad. Reciprocity had, therefore, to do with just the 20 per cent, exported or exportable. He couldn't see where free trade or lower taxation with which free traders liked to regale audiences like the one before him would bring any profit at all. Thirty million American farmers produced in a more favorable climate than was Canada's the same things that Canada produced and exported. They were the competitors then rather than the customers of Canada. They would be ready to sell to Canada but could not be expected to buy from her.

Reciprocity would open the home market to the American farmers, and when prices were low, they would invade the Canadian market. There were three things, however, which were admitted to be permanently higher in price in the United States than in Canada, hay, barley and wheat. As for hay, Major Griesbach declared that the price of this commodity in Alberta was higher than in any other Canadian province, and exceeded in only three of the States of the American Union. The cost of transportation to these States was such that the advance in price was destroyed by the freight rates. As for barley, Canadian barley which was sold for 16.00 in greater Vancouver, which had been milled at Major Griesbach was at pains to point out that this was being done by the farmers on the advice of the department of agriculture, but availed any reference to the extreme difference in barley prices in Canada and the United States, and did not discuss whether it would be as profitable now to raise barley fed hogs when a price of from twenty to thirty cents more per bushel could be obtained on the removal of the present duty of thirty cents a bushel. The difference in the price of wheat in the two countries he attributed to the milling privilege exercised in the United States.
