What New York Society Women Are Wearing Just Now

Cynthia Grey's Many Answers

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn as they are received.]

Send a Gift.

Dear Miss Grey: Is it proper to send a gift at the announcement of a birth?

A.—Yes, or a note of congratulation to the parents.

Dear Miss Grey: Please answer the following question: Could you tell me when the Peterboro ball team plays at St. Thomas? Answer as soon as possible.

A.—Your query should have been addressed to the Sporting Editor.

However, I give you the dates as desired—July 15 and 16, Aug. 19 and 20.

Cheeks Are Too Rosy.

Dear Miss Grey: 1. I have brown hair and eyes and rather dark skin. What are my colors? 2. Will tan be worn this summer? 3. Give remedy for blackheads and large pores. 4. My cheeks are too red. Please give me a remedy. 5. Would a rosette of ribbon on or chiffon be appropriate to wear on commencement night? 6. What cloth and what color would you suggest for a baccalaureate dress?

BRIGHT EYES.

A.—1. All shades of brown, especially the shade to match your eyes; pink and amethyst. 2. Yes. 3. Blackheads are formed by accumulations of dirt, and the best remedy is to wash with clean water and the best of castile soap, dry without friction and apply cold cream which contains a little borax. Borax added to the water will help in the cleansing. This treatment will help the large pores, as will steaming the face with hot cloths occasionally. 4. There is no "remedy." Please understand that your rosy cheeks are a blessing, and that half the women and girls who are pale would give much to possess your roses. Be thankful for them. 5. Yes, to match the band around the head. 6. Why not a golden brown messaline?

Difficult Stains.

Dear Miss Grey: What will remove perspiration stains from a silk waist?

SUBSCRIBER.

A.—It is almost impossible to remove perspiration stains from anything that cannot be boiled or bleached. The stains are both acid and alkaline, and what will remove the one will have no effect upon the other. Peroxide of hydrogen will sometimes remove the stains from a silk garment, but if used too strong will rot the material.

Glossy Starching.

Dear Miss Grey: What can I add to starch for shirts to give them a gloss like the laundry does?

LAUNDRESS.

A.—Put into the starch as it is cooking a teaspoon borax to a quart of starch, and a little spermaceti. If the latter is not at hand a little tallow from a candle or a little lard will do. Add bluing if liked.

MY OLD FRIEND'S SON

[BY WINIFRED BLACK.]

[Copyright: 1912.]

I saw him at the theatre the other day—my old friend's son. He had only a few lines to say in the play, but there was something in his voice and in the way he carried his head that attracted my attention. I looked on the bills—yes, it was the same name—let's see, ten, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, just about that by now, my friend's son—the little tyke who dragged me to the nursery to see his new rocking horse—January, he called him, I remember, the last time I saw him. What bright eyes he had, and what a smile! He looked as if there never was going to be anything for him in the world but music and laughter. And now his father is dead and his mother lies in her low grave, too, and he's out in the world alone fighting his own fight. "Shall look him up," I thought. "No, he'll think me a bore—he looks happy and prosperous. I'll just send him a loving thought over the footlights and let it go at that."

But in the next act the boy stood silent for awhile and watched the star and her troubles, as his part bade him do, and there was something wistful and strained about his face that called to me like a well-loved and well-remembered voice, and I changed my mind.

I went back and hunted up the boy, and he looked at me with eyes full of unshed tears when I mentioned his mother's name, and all the rest of that week we were friends, the boy and I. And now we shall be friends as long as we live, the two of us. And he did need me that very day, too. He was trying to make up his mind about something, and we talked the whole tangled, foolish, complicated affair all over, the boy and I, and I helped him decide to do the square thing, even if it did turn out to be a little troublesome, and I almost heard my old friend's voice calling to me in the wind, and it never sounded sweeter in all the times I have ever heard it.

What's become of the children of our old friends? Some of them are little yet, and some are at school somewhere away from home, perhaps in the very city where we live. What's become of the girl that was the idol of the home we used to visit? Wonderfully clever we all thought her—she bored us sometimes with her caprices and her little spoiled ways, but we never dared let her mother think so. Poor child, she's spoiled no longer.

She is making her own way now—alone—and nobody marvels at her cleverness or thinks the gray old world not good enough for her—now.

The little hands that were so white and so useless—what heavy work they do now, and how well and courageously they do it, too.

Let us look her up and tell her about the good times we used to have with her mother, when all the world was full of love songs and the only thing the moon was for was to look pretty for us and turn an ordinary walk into a romantic adventure.

Who is that hobbleday over there? Come to town to go to school, they say. Doesn't seem to know many people, and he's always on the porch waiting for the postman every morning. Some of the boys in his class call him "the jay." I wonder if he's so very homesick yet.

Why, his father used to drag you on his sled when you were not half so big as this boy of his. Why not tell the hobbleday about it, and tell him what a fine fellow his father was, and is, too? He is a little worried about it now, he is so different from the rest of the kind in his class.

Who is so lonesome on earth as a boy away from home among strangers? Rest light, little mother, in your low grave. I knew you once and loved you, and for your sake that boy of yours shall never wait for a friend as long as I shall live. Give me your hand, dear boy with your mother's eyes. No, I won't sentimentalize over you. I won't lecture you. I'll just love you and never say a word about it—boy fashion. Hark! Whose voice was that in the wind—the voice that used to sing so clear and gay?

"Chillen, keep in de middle of de road, Oh, den chillen, keep in de middle of de road; Don't you look to de right, Don't you look to de left, But keep in de middle of de road."

What a quaint dandy accent she could make, and how we used to love to hear her sing the old jubilee song, "Des Keep to de Middle of de Road." Dear friend, your little dancing feet walked down shadowed roads before you came to the end, didn't they? But you sang all the way, they tell me. "Keep in de middle of de road." Well, that boy of yours shall keep it, too, if there is any virtue in love and earnest effort to help him to remember.

The Birthday Calendar

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY.

Temptation to carry your trouble to law will come to you. Legal advice will help, but you are warned against lawsuits.

Those born today will be brave to the point of rashness. This is a birthday of plungers and speculators.

Tips For Brides

When you marry, love him. After you marry him, study him. If he be honest, honor him. If he be generous, appreciate him. When he is sad, cheer him. When he is cross, amuse him. When he is querulous, listen to him. When he is talkative, trust him. When he is quarrelsome, ignore him. If he be confidential, encourage him. If he be slothful, spur him. If he be noble, praise him. If he be jealous, cure him. If he cares not for pleasure, coax him. If he prefers society, accompany him. If he does you a favor, thank him. When he deserves it, kiss him. Let him think how well you understand him. But never let him know that you can manage him.

Motoring Bonnets

Some motorists cling to the becoming little bonnet, which closely frames in the face, covers the hair at the back, and forms a firm support for the indispensable veil. One of these is in dust-colored satin, with a brim stitched in several rows to give firmness and yet not impede flexibility. It is furnished with ears that can be turned down or turned back according to the conditions of wind and weather.

The brim is lined with a lovely shade of blue and the veil, gray like the bonnet itself, is stitched all around with a border of blue ribbon matching that on the bonnet. The capotes for motorcars are very sensible, and are chiefly made of tadel straw in various colors.

Summer Guest Towels

This is the time when the hospitable woman is making her guest room as attractive as possible for the benefit of summer visitors and week-enders, who will appreciate a restful stay in a real home in the country.

Guest towels are a great convenience for the time at all to iron. The cross-stitched towels in blue or pink patterns are very dainty with cretonne decorated bedrooms, but many housekeepers prefer the pure white towels, scalloped at the ends, or hemmed and embroidered with a small initial. Four of these pretty little towels at least should be provided for the week-end guest, with a sizable bath towel to boot.

On Plain and Striped Linen

The distinguishing feature of this dress is the clever way in which the inset panels, on the hip and elbows, are used to shape the garment at these places. The plain linen is blue and the stripes is white on a blue ground. The chemise of white linen lawn is decorated with bows of the blue and the large buttons are covered with the same. A belt of enameled leather with a pearl buckle is worn.

LUNCHEON DISHES

Fruit may be the first or the final breakfast dainty, according to the preference of the family. Scrambled eggs with tomatoes make a popular early morning dish. Rice muffins are delicious with hot cocoa, an invigorating drink for cool mornings.

Rice Muffins. One cupful milk, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-half cupful of cold boiled rice, two scant teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of sugar, a heaping teaspoonful of butter and one egg. Mix the dry ingredients and rub them through a sieve into a bowl. Melt the butter and beat it into the rice. Beat the egg and add it to the milk. Add this mixture to the dry ingredients, then stir in the rice. Bake in gem pans 25 minutes in a moderate oven.

Baked Beans and Tomatoes. Did you ever bake beans with tomatoes? If not, try some. Soak a pint of beans over night. In the morning parboil and place them into a level tablespoon of salt. Add to them a level tablespoon of sugar, two of rice, one of black pepper and one of hot water. Place the pot in a cool oven and bake slowly; as the water boils away or is absorbed by the beans fill the pot with tomatoes (canned or fresh) may be used; if fresh, peel and cut into pieces. Long and slow baking is required, and one quart of tomatoes should be used. If more moisture is required, add a quart of water. When used, add hot water. Let them cook at least 10 hours—12 is better. This is a delicious dish and can be reheated as often as necessary. With rice well cooked and a green salad dressed simply with a French dressing, it forms a perfect meal, and you are saved the cost of the salt pork. Beans baked in this way and sealed in jars while hot will keep as long as any canned food.

Curried Eggs. Fry an onion in butter and over it make a sauce of milk and flour and a teaspoonful of curry powder. Cut hard boiled eggs into halves, arrange them on a deep dish, pour the curry mixture over them and arrange a circle of boiled rice around them. Garnish with parsley.

Creamed Cucumbers. Peel six medium sized cucumbers and cut in small pieces. Melt one-fourth cupful of butter in a saucepan and add the cucumbers. Place where they will cook slowly and let simmer twelve minutes. Then add two cupfuls of cream, season with salt and pepper and cook three minutes longer. Serve with toasted bread sticks.

"There's a dance of leaves in the aspen bower; There's a titter of winds in the beechen tree; There's a smile on the fruit, and a smile on the flower. And a laugh from the brook that runs to the sea." —William Cullen Bryant.

There are seasons when Nature seems to give a patient smile, as if she would like to laugh, but the burden of gray storm clouds is too heavy. There are other seasons when, bleak and desolate, she turns a bereaved face toward us. These seasons do not last long.

Taking her twelve months in the year, she furnishes a splendid and inspiring example of a brave and happy spirit. Her frowns do not last, and when she smiles into sunshine her smile is so bright the frown is forgotten.

Or all the seasons when she is happiest and gayest, there is none like summer. It is then that she fairly bubbles over with joy. She titters in every melting snowdrop, she twinkles in
