DANCING THAT BROKE TEN COMMANDMENTS

Sin of Children of Israel Is Repeated Today, Says Rev. A. C. Bingham.

Preaching at Egerton Street Baptis Church on Sunday last on the subject The Dancing That Broke the Commendments," Rev. A. C. Bingham based his sermon on Exodus xxxii., 19, based his sermon on Exedus xxxii., 19, which tells the story of Moses's anger and the breaking of the original tables on which the Ten Commandments had been engraved.

The presence of Moses among his people, said Mr. Bingham, was like that of a mother in her family, or a school teacher in her class—it preserved law and order. We are all in God's sight inter what our desires are. "As a man just what our desires are. "As a man (desires) thinketh in his heart, so is he." They constructed a god out of the jewelry of their heads. That is just what people are doing today. They say God is the sum total of the jewels of human judgment. The sun is 32,000,000 miles above the earth, and God's judgments are as much higher than man's judgments as the heavens are above the earth. It was the desire to participate in this idolatrous dancing that caused these people to break the first two commandments. trous dancing that caused these people to break the first two commandments, and with them all the commandments. This seems to be indicated by what Moses did. With the Ten Commandments written by the finger of God on a slab of stone, Moses was returning when he found the whole camp excitedly engaged in an idolatrous dance. His anger waxed hot, and he flung the His anger waxed hot, and he flung the slab down and smashed it.

Many parents are opposed to the dance, and their children are warned. Many churches are opposed to the dance, Many churches are opposed to the dance, and their people are so instructed. Many young converts consider that for them to dance would be to violate their ideal of Christian living. But how often it is the allurements of the dance that cause these children to make their first break with the training of the home, that cause these church members to make their first break with the teaching of their church, that cause these converts to make their first break with their ideals, and causing them to make their first break is largely responsible for all the consequences of loose living.

Aaron said the people were set on conservation and their people were set on the dance and their first break is largely responsible for all the consequences of loose living.

Aaron said the people were set on mischief. The consequences were first on themselves. The record said they were naked. Their conduct brought on them the disfavor and judgment of God and the agree of their great liberator.

Moses got an audience with the people and hurled out this challenge: "Who is on the Lord's side?" He found that thousands of people had been loyal, and they gathered about their religious leader and helped him fight the thing I through. Then came the exhortation, "Consecrate yourselves this day unto the Lord."
