THE OLD MAN AWAKES.

For two years, Old Man Berlin permitted one of his youngest boys to manage his affairs, while he dozed comfortably by the fireside, thinking that the best town in Canada was so securely situated that almost anyone could guide its affairs.

But it was not the case. The Old Man learned that one young, inexperienced and ambitious youth could undo more within a few months than he and his other sons could bind in years. When he awoke, he learned that many of his older sons had become discouraged in the face of what the younger was doing and that things were at such a pass that they could neither back nor go ahead. The Old Man's ire was raised. He took immediate hold and proceeded to clean house. And he cleaned it. As a result, the youth will require to eat his meals standing up for a long while, so severe was the spanking his dad administered. And the Old Man is on the job again.

We congratulate our citizens on the good day's work they did for Berlin yesterday. It means more to the town than appears on the face of things. For instance it shows that when the intelligent electorate resolves upon doing a thing, they can accomplish it. The people were united. They worked as one man and secured a sweeping victory.

Another feature of pronounced importance to Berlin is that it was made clear that the persons who deliberately attempt to set class against class are not wanted. Instead the great bulk of the electorate desires to see capital and labor marching shoulder to shoulder for their own and the community's good. To-day the sign is out: "No demagogue need apply."

Still another good point is that the public spirit will take a fresh grip of affairs and go in to make the most of its opportunities. The eclipse which has partially obscured the Board of Trade is now passed, and it is to be hoped, passed for keeps.

The Holiday Rush Is Over

And we must thank the good people of the two towns for the splendid trade we had.

Every year since we came to Berlin has been one continuous advancement. We cannot afford to stand still, and we thank the people for appreciating so substantially our efforts to please them.

The same progressive policy will be followed during the coming year—the same effort to please—and the same effort to give the best possible value to our patrons. In our lines it is not necessary to go out of town to buy anything—we can meet the city prices and save you the express.

We extend to everyone the best of good wishes for the coming year.

DOROTHY LYON.

With the "Annie Laurie" Co., at the Star, Thursday Jan 5th.

Perhaps, at the present juncture, no citizen of Berlin could have led the forces of good government to success other than Mr. Schulz. He possesses the confidence and esteem of our citizens. All classes of them supported him. The victory belongs to no one branch of the electorate but to the people as a whole.

In our opinion, the new mayor will succeed in removing much of the distrust existing; that he will endeavor to introduce harmony and succeed in having the great majority of them pulling the one way.

We hope to see Berlin grow and prosper under him and take rank as a city before his first term of office closes. The electorate has chosen a council which may fairly be said to be a strong one. It will work with Mr. Schulz from the moment he turns on the power.

Outside of the election for Council, we note that some good men have fallen. This is regrettable. But "Try Again" is a good motto.

Now that the affairs of Berlin are settled for another year, all differences should be dropped. Shake hands all round and each elector resolve to make 1911 the best in Berlin's history.

"ANNIE LAURIE."

Welcome as a breath of fresh air from the ocean on a hot summer day is the soul-stirring drama "Annie Laurie," so vastly different is the play from all others. After one has had a surfeit of so-called musical comedy and cheap melodrama "Annie Laurie," with its pure atmosphere and air of romance, is a welcome change.

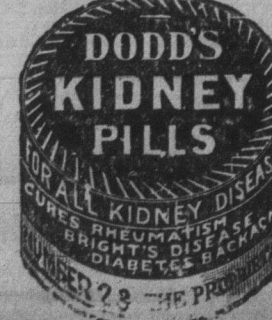

Carrying us back to the days of our forefathers when men lived by right of sword and honor was held dear. After one has witnessed the production one leaves the theatre with a better feeling toward mankind and a greater reverence for God's greatest work—woman. "Annie Laurie" is a great, pure woman who has been immortalized in song and in M. Douglas Flattery's great play of that name she is held up as a shining example for all womanhood. Living in a time when all was war and strife and when all tears were tried to the utmost she never once lost her sweet womanly nature that made her beloved by all who knew her.

Born in the 17th century, the daughter of the Laird of Maxwellton, she met and fell in love with one Robert Reid, a soldier of fortune, who through his devotion to King James VII became embroiled in serious difficulties and is thrown in prison and threatened with torture. Lord Greenock, a dissipated Nobleman of high rank, is enamored of Annie's charms and is desirous of possessing her. He forcibly detains her against her will in his own castle where he attempts to make love to her and bring her to his own low level by base means but she is true to the man she loves and pleads for his freedom. She escapes from Lord Greenock's castle, much to that person's chagrin. His fury knows no bounds when he finds she has escaped him and through a trick he again gets Annie in his power. He is about to force her to marry him when she is rescued by Robert and his troops. Greenock, in a rage, attempts to kill Robert but is himself killed by one of Robert's own men.

The entire production is one of merit replete with stirring scenes and thrilling situations interspersed with comedy to relieve the intensity of the heavier scenes, through which runs a sweet love story. An especial feature is the great prison scene in the second act when, through the bars of the prison window, Robert sings that sweet, Scotch classic, dear to all hearts, "Annie Laurie."

POSERS FOR A LIBRARIAN—QUERIES PUT TO ONE MAN

The busy editor knows in his hour of sorrow how to sympathize with the busy librarian, says the Literary Digest. If either or both are flattered at being taken as founts of universal knowledge, their emotions of self-complacency can not long survive the drains upon their busy hours by people who seem moved to emulate the talkative child in asking odd, irrelevant, or unnecessary questions. The Princeton Alumni Weekly furnishes us a statement made by Prof. W. H. Clemens, the reference librarian, of the questions received "from the outside," that is, from the non-academic world, which he is asked to answer. The range is wide, "from
