The Dilemma.

The Legislative Assembly, by a unanimous vote, yesterday refused to accept the Appropriation Bill as sent down from the Upper House and declined to surrender the power which pression of opinion and not an Act. they indubitably possess of determinmates, therefore, stand as they stood when they left the House, and as the Legislature has but three days more of vitality left in its corpus, there year's government unles the Upper House consent to pass the measure the last flicker of a candle and was only in its original form. What the Governor will do in such a crisis it is difficult thought if the House had any control over Council) the amount voted by the Assembly, and will allow matters to continue as they have been going for many months past, in the meantime laying a statement of the case before Lord Carnarvon for his decision. The first course would involve a stoppage of the public business, and result in confusion and ultimate expense withnot receive the approval of the Colowithout serious trouble here or censure at home. His position is a most unenviable one and scarcely to be coveted, even when accompanied by a salary debate by the honorable members was entitled to the warm support of every entitled to the warm support of every of the Colony passed by this House on the lover of the Colony. But in accepting 21st June 1866, and transmitted to Her Mathe amount voted by the Lower House as a "lump sum," the Council committed a great and amusing blunder—they actually adopted the unconstitutional additions of the Assembly, and recognized the power of that body to initiate money grants, because the "lump sum" contains several items that were voted in direct contradiction of the constitution. The duty of the Council in the matter was simple and plain. They should have struck out the unconstitutional portions of the bill and sent it down stairs again. This action would, no doubt, have been approved by the Lower House, and the miserable business would have been at an end for the session. As matters now stand there is but little propect of an amicable arrangement being come to. And all the time, all the money, all the wind expended during the session has been absolutely thrown away.

Mr Young seconded the motion.

(Dr Powell here came in.) Mr Pidwell ridiculed the resolution and showed cases where works were required, which it might be necessary for the Governwill be no supplies voted for this ment to carry out at once, and the inconven ience that would arise by the Governor's hands being thus tied. The motion was like something to go to the constituencies with.

Mr McClure supported the resolution, he to imagine. Perhaps His Excellency will the Executive at all it was in reference to turn the key in the doors of the public case required the expenditure of money, it financial matters. He thought if any urgent offices and leave the officials standing was easy enough for His Excellency to call in the cold; or perhaps he will consid- the House together, but the House should not power. Dr Dickson defended the resolution which was carried, Mr Pidwell dissenting. UNCONDITIONAL UNION.

Mr Young reopened the debate on his resplution rescinding the portion of the Union Resolutions of January, 1865, asking for unconditional Union of the Colonies.

Mr McClure, although he agreed with the principle of the resolution, would move an amendment. It was generally believed that the Union Bill which had been introout any work being performed-for if duced into the House of Parliament was not passed, but if the House took no action durthe appointees of the Crown be not paid ing the interregnum, a similar bill would no this year they must be next, so there doubt be introduced by Lord Derby's Govwould be no saving in that respect; ernment. He thought that his amendment would not cause the House to stultify the adoption of the second course tself. In this opposition they are sion to the series of resolutions on the state the Colony wanted.

Mr DeCosmos spoke at length. He was quite prepared to accept one Council for the United Colonies, although he was as much in favor of a preponderance of popular representation as any member. It was believed at the time Union was asked for that there would only be one House with about two-thirds popular voice. He thought the proposed Council would work vigorously and it would be most suicidal to say that there should be no Union except on the basis of popular representation. It would serve to retard Union and to throw the Colony back, and looking at it in a monetary point of view he would on behalf of his constituents, sooner than be without Union, accept the proposed bill, or even one Governor without a House. He had reason for asserting that to-day from Cariboo to New Westminster the people were most anxious for Union with the Col-

Mr McClure said it was evident the pass as it had been a long time before them, and was only sent down at the last moment, when it was too late. He thought the responsibility must be thrown upon the Council by the House adhering to its own bill.

Dr Dickson thought the amendment ought to be sent back.

Mr DeCosmos moved that the amendments be returned to the Council that the onus of the consequences might rest where it properly belonged. The motion was agreed to nem con.

Mr DeCosmos offered a resolution stating that the House did not concur in the amendments and denied the right of the Council to amend the Supply Bill. It was a clear usurpation of taken upon itself to vote the supply as a whole, leaving it to the Executive to expend the money as it thougt fit; he should certainly not vote for any such thing and he thought the House would be a unit on that point.

Mr Young seconded the resolution; it was evident the Executive intended to do what it pleased with the public money.

The Council's amendments were unanimously rejected and Mr DeCosmos' motion passed without dissent. SUPPLEMENTAL SUPPLY.

House went into committee, Dr Dickson in the chair, on the Supplemental Supply Bill $26,581 64, being the excess of expenditure in 1865, which was reported.

Mr Cochrane moved the suspension of Standing Orders to enable him to introduce his motion respecting the disposal of the Dredger Machine.

The motion was refused, there not being a two-third vote.

Mr Young moved that the report of the Committee be adopted and a copy forwarded to the Executive, which, after some remarks from Messrs. De-Cosmos, Pidwell and Dickson, was agreed to.
