WORLD A FINE EXAMPLE.

The City of Glasgow in 1891 had a population of 565,700 within a compactly in habited area of 6,111 acres. In the same yead 5,750 acres of the adjoining sub-urbs were annexed by act of Parliament, increasing the population by almost 100,000 souls. To-day the populaon is calculated at 800,000, living on With the exception of of London to be 51 to the acre, while that of Glasgow was 84 to the acre, and that vigilance must be the price of san- has sold it at 7; the price is rising. The prevalence of typhus fever in 1864 own rupee making up seven, the quoted Induced the authorities to establish a pavilion for the reception of poor patients. This answered the purpose of an isolation hospital so well that later it was determined to extend the system. A private estate of thirty acres, banks of the Clyde, was purchased. Here a series of pavilions were erected, which give the place the appearance of a beautiful village, with its trees and lawns, its play-grounds and beautiful flavor against any fixed day, if you can find a taker. corporation was the driving of twentynew streets through the old, crowded tenement parts of the city, and the widening of twenty-five of the existing alleys. On the site of some of the buildings which were demolished model tenements were erected by the corporation. Lodging houses for the floating poor population were also where a night's accommodaion with clean sheets on a woven wire mattress can be had for from 7 to 9 cents. These yield a return of from 4 to 5 per cent. net on the ost of construction. The latest development in this field of municipal activity is a home, which will serve for widows and widowers with small children. Provision will be made for the care of children while the bread winner goes out to work. The next venture was in bath houses, upon which $600,000 was spent. They have a patronage of 450,000 a year. They are provided with swimming instructors, etc., and perhaps yield as much satisfaction as any part of the machinery provided for the public good by the municipality.

Other liberally patronized institutions are the public wash-houses. For cents an hour a woman is allowed the use of a stall containing an improved steam boiling arrangement and fixed tubs with hot and cold water and his horse. But when a decline was chambers and roller mangles enable the work to be done so expeditiously may return to her tenement with her task accomplished. Street lighting being a municipal affair, is ample and profuse, the cost of lighting common stairs being greater than that for lighting the city streets. The owners of houses pay a share of the expense of stair lighting, but the city meets a fair proportion of it on the principle that each light is as good as a policeman. Glasgow's biggest enterprise, after the deepening of the Clyde, was the bringing of its civic water supply from Loch Katrine, 34 miles distant, in the hills. The work was done at an expenditure f $14,000,000. By it a daily supply equal to a population of 1,500,000 or 2,000,000 can be obtained. The cost of water to consumers is about 1 cent. per 2,00 gallons. Two per cent. is put away every year as a sinking fund.

The success attendant upon the water-works project predisposed the people to a favorable consideration of the municipalization of similar services, such as the gas supply. The city ple to a favorable consideration of the municipalization of similar services, such as the gas supply. The city bought out the private owners in 1869 and has ever since managed this service to the unqualified satisfaction of the citizens When the works were taken over the price of gas to the consumer was $1.14 per thousand feet. It has been 60 cents for some years now, and the quality has improved, although the cost of gas-making coal has greatly increased. The department has greatly increased. So successful had been the municipal 50 pieces Canadian management of all these matters that it was natural when the corporation and the tramway company failed to agree as to the renewal of the company's lease that there should be an agitation for the assumption of this CITY OF GLASGOW. It has proved a thorough success. Glasgow is a compactly built town, so that the great bulk of the passengers carried do not ride long distances. It was, therefore, decided to divide the routes SETS THE MUNICIPALITIES OF THE into half mile stages and charge a fare of a cent for each half mile. This has proved highly satisfactory, and the corporation will be able to at least meet all its engagements in respect to the tramways on the basis of these fares. It would take a great deal of space to tell of all the interests that this live old-world city has included in the sphere of municipal management. It mprises markets, slaughter houses, parks, play grounds and open spaces, libraries, harbor improvements and management. The great Scotch metropolis is certainly an object lesson to the
