EDITORIAL

KEEPING THE POT BOILING.

Brooklyn Eagle: The curious spectacle of American politics, its remoteness from what should be actualities of our common life is passing through its usual campaign phases. In Maine, Republicans and Democrats fight about a secret society. In Massachusetts, Republicans fight amongst themselves about Prohibition. The President is all worked up about Communism, and plenty of people are howling about national defence. It reminds one of a mad pantomime danced to grotesque music. The audience are meanwhile wondering what it is all about.

ARMS AND AGGRESSION

Le Journal (Paris): What has happened in Germany since January 1st, 1923, the day on which Nollet's Commission for the control of disarmament ceased its operations? We may be able to judge from the interesting information that one month is now barely needed for German industry to reorganize itself for the manufacture of arms, ten months being more than enough to equip an army of four million men with all necessary material. Nevertheless, at the London Conference the good faith of Germany was accepted. General Nollet, who knows better than anybody the conditions in Germany, was sharply on the alert, and, if he left the matter to M. Herriot, it was because he did not regard the situation as dangerous.

CHAOS IN CHINA.

Boston Globe: China, in her civil difficulties, must be left alone by outsiders, just as the United States insisted that it be left alone when it had a civil war on its hands. It affairs in the Oriental Republic are at a pass where civil war is inescapable intervention will not remedy them. It will merely mean an increase in the number of combatants. And when it is all over, and "peace" has been imposed, and a "stable government" set up at Peking—the Chinese will continue to fight as they see fit, and no nation on earth has either the money or the military which would be required to maintain such a delusive set of fictions. No nation of 450,000,000 people can be coerced into support of a government they do not sanction. The developments in China emphasize once more the desirability of letting China work out her own affairs in her own way.

STATESMEN AND GOLE.

Baltimore Sun: The assertion that statesmen conceal their golf scores lest they should indicate a proficiency at the game which spelt neglect of public business has been scouted as ridiculous. The actual fact is that there is not one in a hundred of them who play within gunshot of par. If their constituents could see them, so far from being incensed over their expertise, they would take them on a wager and probably skin the life out of them. They constitute, by and large, the worst set of dubs to be found. They tear up the turf, display the game, stall about on the putting greens, forgetting how many strokes they have played. They do everything, in fact, but what the ball down the fairway. They slice, they heel, they pull, the schlaft—making themselves a general nuisance. They are not above suspicion that they sole their clubs in bunkers and tee up in the rough.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Fort Anne Park.

Editor, The Monitor:—
The following appeared in the Annapolis Royal "Spectator," Sept. 11th:

Gall.

Editor Spectator:

If I go into Halifax and wish to ride about the really spacious roads of Point Pleasant Park in my humble "Ford" I am debarred from doing so, but a Haligonian comes to Annapolis Royal and feels at liberty to force his lordly "Studebaker" around a path six feet wide, with many twists and turns, that is very properly reserved by the park management for footpassengers. At least your correspondent "Tourist," writing from Halifax, tells us he did this and seems rather proud of it.

I think that the only word to fit the case is the short one I have selected as a heading for this letter.

X. P.

Annapolis Royal, 5th Sept., 1924.

[Note.—The Spectator is informed that Point Pleasant Park in Halifax is in no respect whatever, a Canadian National Park and the above comparison consequently falls flat, the best evidence of the Fort Anne road around the ramparts being fit for motor cars lying in the fact that many of the largest and heaviest makes of cars have travelled it without the slightest trouble—and, as in the case of the former correspondent, unprevented. The correspondent's statement above that this road is "very properly reserved for foot passengers" seems to be open to question, as it was certainly not built exclusively for foot passengers, and being in a Canadian National Park, it comes within the proclamation of Park Commissioner Harkin that: "The basic idea is that they should be absolutely open to all. Every Canadian can come here and enjoy it by right of citizenship. These parks belong to him." Knowing Fort Anne to be a Canadian National Park, any tourist might be pardoned for running his car through any road in it that was open.—Ed Spec.]

To this the following reply was sent, but not published:—
Point Pleasant and Fort Anne.
Editor Spectator:—
Point Pleasant and Fort Anne are alike in being public parks, publicly owned and open freely to all who wish to resort to them, and both, like our streets and other common property, are subject to regulation in their use by the public. A well regulated individual, even if he happened to be a Halifax "Tourist" in a "Studebaker," would not feel free to do anything in one of these places that he would not dare do in the other. That was the point I sought to make in my last letter and if "Tourist" has anything to say in answer to it, surely he can be left to speak for himself.

Fort Anne, as you justly observe, is a National Park. The Federal law governing all these parks contains the provision that a motor vehicle shall be permitted to enter park grounds only via such roads and to be driven on such roads as shall be designated, the penalty for violating this provision being fine or imprisonment.

What roads are "designated" in the case of Fort Anne can, I imagine, be easily learned by enquiry at the park office, but I must respectfully decline to believe that any person old enough and possessed of sufficient mental capacity to drive a car would mistake a six foot passage way for a motor road. A plea that he did so would not avail him in a court of law, and even a tender and sympathetic "stipendiary" would be compelled to steel his heart and apply the law in such a case.

Annapolis Royal, 13th Sept., 1924.
This is a matter of interest to motorists and the public generally and I would be glad if you would kindly give it publicity in your columns.

EDWARD BAUCKMAN STRUCK BY CAR AND RENDERED UNCONSCIOUS.

On Monday evening about eight o'clock as Charles Everett was driving home in his car he noticed a man lying on the road at Tupperville. Stopping up he got out and found it was Ed. Bauckman, unconscious with a cut over his left ear from which considerable blood had come. He removed the man to Mr. F. H. Willett's nearest house, and doctor Armstrong was summoned. He dressed the wound which was a severe one but Bauckman did not recover consciousness till Tuesday morning. It appears that he went down to Round Hill in Milton Brooks car and Mr. Brooks states he brought him back to Tupperville hall about half past seven. What transpired after that does not appear to be very clear but Mr. Bauckman states he was struck by a car passing along the road nearly a mile below the hall.

MARRIED.

Venning—Simpson.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Brown, Amesbury, Mass., was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Sept. 17th at 6.45 when Richard S. Venning, Jr., of Richmond, Virginia, was united in marriage to Miss Lucy J. Simpson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Simpson of Victoria, N. S., by the Rev. S. J. Cann of Marlborough Baptist Church.

The floral decorations were very beautiful and were arranged by Mrs. Frederick L. Rice. Gladioli, dahlias and hydrangeas were extensively used.

The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Miss Edith True, pianist and Miss Adelaide Tigh, flutist, as the bridal party entered the drawing room. The bride wore a dress of white Canton Crepe trimmed with Chantilly lace with tulle veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and maiden hair fern.

Miss Isabelle Simpson, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and was dressed in yellow georgette trimmed with satin baby ribbon and carried a bouquet of asters and maiden hair fern. Little Francis Bartlett acted as flower girl and looked charming in white organdie.

The groom was attended by his brother Edward Venning.

Mrs. B. G. Pillsbury and Mrs. Clarence Hines presided at the table in the dining room, which was decorated in pink, white and green. A dainty buffet lunch was served by young lady friends of the bride and also by her sisters, the Misses Mary, Annie and Edith Simpson of Somerville, Mass.

After an evening spent with music, Mr. and Mrs. Venning left amid showers of confetti and cheers for Boston, en route for New York, Washington, and thence to Richmond, Virginia, where they will reside.

The bride's travelling suit was of blue tulle with hat to match. She was for many years a resident of Amesbury, Mass., a graduate of the training school of the Anna Jaques Hospital. During the war she enlisted for overseas service and on her return continued her duties in the U. S. Public Health Service. For the past year she has been a nurse at the Orange N. J. Memorial Hospital.

The groom is a graduate of the University of Virginia. He served for a year with the A. E. F. He is employed as mechanical engineer by the C. & O. R. R. at Richmond, Va.

Among the guests was the mother of the bride from Nova Scotia and the mother of the groom from Charlott., Va.

The presents were many and very beautiful, including silver, cut glass, china, etc., showing the popularity of the bride with the people of Amesbury. Her many friends in Nova Scotia extend congratulations and wish them a long and happy married life.

OBITUARY.

Stephen C. Budder.

The death took place on Friday last at the home of Mr. James Raymond Phinney, Phinney's Cove, of Mr. Stephen C. Budder of Johnston, Pennsylvania. Mr. Budder who had worked in the U. S. for over twenty years with Mr. Phinney came to Nova Scotia in July for a visit with his friend but took ill soon after and remained partially paralysed till his death. The deceased was a native of New York City, an only child and was unmarried. The funeral services were conducted on Sunday afternoon by Rev. D. W. Dixon and interment took place in Hampton Cemetery. In the evening Rev. D. W. Dixon held at Phinney's Cove a memorial service, well attended which showed a spirit of sympathy by pastor and people toward the stranger dying so far from his native home.

Old age and the wear of time teach many things.
