This season we have added to our stock of Stoves and Ranges the Doherty High Oven Range.

Although this range is somewhat the same in appearance as other makes of high oven ranges the construction is entirely different. Instead of being built of ordinary sheet steel, it is constructed of heavy cast iron, which holds the heat and makes a better baker. The firebox is deep and roomy and fitted for both wood and coal.

Mrs. Wilson has been an active member for many years and her valued assistance in church work will be greatly missed.

More than two hundred and fifty new pupils enrolled at the London Normal School last week. This is an unprecedented number of new students and surpasses the enrolment of last year by one hundred. A peculiar feature of this year's attendance is the lack of young men among the scholars. Only five young men appeared at the school, which is twenty less than the number of last year.

The reports of damage to the American corn crop by frost, which couched in optimistic phrases by the government, look discouraging. In Wisconsin and the Dakotas the damage was from 30 to 35 per cent., while in some parts of Virginia it reached 50 per cent. The entire grain belt from West Virginia and Ohio to the Rockies appears to have suffered more or less. The latest crop report indicated the biggest yield of corn in the nation's history if only the frost would hold off for a few weeks longer. The frost did not hold off.

If a man begins at sixteen years of age and works three hundred days every year until he is seventy, he can become a millionaire, provided he can make an average saving of $61.74 a day during the entire period. If he waits until he is twenty years, and works until he is sixty-five, his net savings must be a little over $74 a day during that period. Considering the above figures, does it seem possible that any man, through his own efforts, can honestly become a millionaire in a lifetime? Yet since the war began some men have accumulated from one to three millions.

The Sarnia Canadian says:—In the early days of Lambton county, when the full red moon crept up out of the lake twice in one month to cast its yellow ghostly light upon the forests and farms of pioneer citizens, the ancestors of present agriculturists would hasten to gather in their crops, split plenty of firewood and prepare for heavy frosts. It is an Indian tradition handed down to the present generation, that two full moons in one month the forerunner of a killing early frost. For the first time in seven years, two full moons will be seen this September. There are farmers, scores of them in Lambton, who remember the legend of the two full moons. The first full moon has already risen and set. It appeared September 1. It will re-appear again, the weatherman says, on the final day of the month.

FAIR WILL BE BIG SUCCESS

Mosa and Ekfrid's Forty-Second Annual Exhibition.

Ideal weather favored the opening of the forty-second annual fall exhibition of the Mosa and Ekfrid Agricultural Society at Glencoe on Tuesday, and at time of writing everything points to the most successful fair in the history of the society.

The list of entries already exceeds expectations in many of the departments, particularly in the ladies' section, and there is an unusually fine exhibit of field and garden products. Prospects are good for a big show of horses and other live stock. The speed track is in splendid condition, giving promise of some first-class grandstand entertainment.

A band and merry-go-round, with other midway features more numerous than ever before, should complete all that could be desired for the occasion.

Letter From France.

Pte. Geo. W. Smith, writing recently from the front in France, says:—

I have a great faith in human nature, and I am a lover of my immortal Bobby Burns, so you may believe me when I say I'm not selfish enough to think that the soldiers are doing it all in this great war. I know that every honest man and woman in Glencoe and in Canada are doing all they can to help the boys at the front. But there is a limit to what you can do—there is a limit to what we can do—as in my own way I will try to show and prove.

In the recent great drive that the allies made I saw with my own eyes what could be done and what could not be done. I'm not a trench fighter, but I was on the battlefield the morning after the battle. Large trees were strewn all over as though mowed with a scythe. There was hardly a blade of grass to be seen. The mine craters presented great cavernous holes that were awful to behold. How any human being could have lived through the terrible bombardment of the night beats my comprehension. Miraculous though it may seem, some did survive. Burial parties found them and gave them their last rites.

And what I saw in our immediate sector is only a tithe of what happened the night of June 7th. I don't need to enlarge upon it. G. W. Moore in his letter describes a battle scene of operations of the battle he described. Some of our lads, on the morning after the battle, said, "Why didn't they drive the Germans further? Why didn't the Tommies go after them when the going was good?" Others might think the same. There's a limit to what can be done.

It's an immense undertaking, as you may imagine, to transport thousands of large guns and guns of all calibres, with necessary ammunition, over a new-fought battle ground or front. Soldiers after such a nerve-racking time must rest. They must have food and drink. Horses must be fed and watered. There is nothing in the devastated area that is fit for consumption. So everything must needs be brought up. Roads must be built; railroads must be laid. German soldiers destroy everything they can to delay our advance. Their own retreat is made easy by means of protected tunnels, and in various other ways. As soon as they get out of range of our guns they construct a new front, and we betide the sector who goes while the going is good. If they get very far beyond the general line, they come in for sniping and a strong counter attack.

And this is the situation along hundreds of miles of a front. Truly it is a tremendous undertaking. As I said before, there is a limit to what you at home can do—there is a limit to what we out here can do.

You mentioned in your letter about sending me a Transcript. You can send me nothing better. Billy Hawes and myself would appreciate a Transcript better than any letter you might send. With all due respect to you, Sir, and your readers, a Transcript is a letter that can't be beat.

Now, I want to thank you for what I think you have been the means of doing for me, namely, I have received three or four unexpected letters. I am sure I appreciate them, and will do my best to answer them. But in anticipation of what kind friends might do, I would like those friends to know that I want no parcels. I'm doing fine and am in good health, so any luxuries I might get would only spoil my appetite for eating the rations that a soldier gets. The fighting boys are the lads who need things most. They are up against it more than we are.

Like a good many officers I have read of, I did not come to England because the trip was free, or to have a good time and revel in luxury. I was turned down three times, but made it at last. The officers with no employment, when it came to the test, it seems, were found wanting. They would not give up their commissions, and come over as privates. We can easily understand why. Many of our privates out here got more wages in civil life than some officers ever got or ever will get. The time will come, some day when by a man's records we shall know them, as we shall be known.

Exemption on Eight Counts.

Exemption from service under the Military Service Act, may be claimed on eight separate grounds. The forms of application, which will be available at postoffices throughout the Dominion in the course of a few days, make this clear. The grounds are:—

1.—The importance of continuing employment in habitual occupation.

2.—Importance of continuing employment for which he is specially qualified.

3.—Importance of continuing education or training.

4.—Serious hardship owing to exceptional financial obligations.

5.—Serious hardship owing to exceptional business obligations.

6.—Serious hardship owing to exceptional domestic position.

7.—Ill health or infirmity.

8.—Adherence to religious denomination, of which the articles of faith forbid combatant service.

The form is drafted much after the style of a ballot paper. The applicant for exemption is required to place a cross opposite the ground on which the claim is made. His case will then go to the local tribunal to which proof in support will be submitted.

Application for exemption may be made, not only by the man himself, but by his employer or a near relative. In Great Britain claims for exemption on the grounds of a man being indispensable in his civil occupation are generally made by the employer, who appeals to the tribunal on behalf of his men. It is felt that such a claim can best be made by the employer. In any event, a man claiming essential occupation would need to have the support of his employer to his claim.

The forms of military report are equally simple. These will be used by men who do not wish to claim exemption. They avoid the necessity of reporting in person until such time as a recruit is called up for service. The declaration is signed by the man himself.

"I hereby report myself for military service. I will report myself for duty when called upon by notice mailed to me at—"

Blank spaces follow for the name and address of the recruit, his status whether a bachelor a widower, his present occupation and the name and address of his employer.

Upon Mr. Losee's report will depend the amount of the Government grant for road making in the county next year. His report will be submitted at the December sitting of the county council. This year's grant from the Government was $28,000 for construction and maintenance purposes.

A Kentucky Editor's View.

The following is the view expressed of Germany and the war by a Kentucky editor:

"The world must give Germany a licking," he said. "She has trampled on the rights of the world and of humanity. She is a beast. She has a germ of what we call a bank burglar or a clever horse thief. If Thomas A. Edison had spent his time perfecting schemes or devices for robbing vaults he could be richer than the Rothschilds and Morgans combined. If the United States had spent all her time figuring out ways to kill and subjugate and had grown to practice treachery and deceit, she could lick the world with one hand tied around her neck. Germany does not deserve any credit. She is a gunman gone crazy. She has murdered, pillaged, ravaged and outraged, and now that she is caught up an alley, her hands dripping and her gun smoking, she wants the world to listen while she says:—'Come on, now. I'm through. I've killed your women and children, and your ammunition's all gone, so let's call it all off and begin where we left off. Maybe I won't do it again.'"

"You know what we'd do with a man in Kentucky who acted like that, don't you?—course—everyone does. Well, that's what the world ought to do to Germany. When a man uses brass knuckles you can't get anywhere fighting him with feather pillows. That's what the Allies have been doing. We ought to drop bombs on all the cities. Give them as good as they send. 'We live up in the mountains here, but we get the papers from outside, and we know what Germany has been doing. We are for the administration—every man and woman of us. We know it's the world's fight. Sometimes away down here I have blue moments, but I think that maybe the world will let Germany settle up without getting punished. I hope not.'"

Strathroy Man's Gruesome Curio.

W. G. Meekison has placed on view in his show window in Strathroy a most terribly gruesome but interesting curiosity which he secured while touring. It is a "shrunken head." It comes from the Huasteca tribe of Indians of South America, who are head hunters. The shrunken head is as its name denotes "shrunken," viz:—A man's head in its natural form shrunken to the size of an orange without the loss of an expression or feature. The hair on the head and face is still retained, as well as the eye-brows, which are visible. In fact, one would be able, if one knew the savage before his death, to recognize his head in miniature. The head is almost black, most likely from the process used in shrinking, and is hard. It is impossible to tell the method used in doing this, although it is thought that the savages first place the head on a stick and leave it for three days. When the bones and brain are removed, it is treated with hot stones and smoke, which has the quality of alum, until the head is contracted. It is said that no youth may be admitted to the caste of a warrior, until he has prepared the head of an enemy.

Melbourne's Big Fair.

Melbourne's great annual fair will be held on Tuesday, October 2. The exhibition gives promise this year of trimming all previous records. Heavy entries and a large attendance are assured and all that the directors are anxious about is the weather.

Go to Church Sunday.

A "Go to Church Sunday" has been fixed for Sunday, the 30th inst. Everybody is asked in a general way and will be also asked in a personal way to go to some church at least once on that day, no matter whether they have been in the habit of going or not. The crisis of war time, together with the blessing of Providence in a bountiful harvest, make this a most fitting act. It is to be hoped that the thoughtful friends who have autos and rigs will between now and the 30th of the month look up those who are unable to attend except through the kindly help of somebody else. In so doing they will be performing a good Christian act. An appeal is also made to the regular church attendants to lend a helping hand in making this "Go to Church Sunday" a success by inviting everybody to fall in line with the movement.
