

Iranian students in Canada under attack

OTTAWA (CUP) - Iranian students studying in Canada and the U.S. have been under increasing attack, apparently in retaliation for the action of Tehran students who kidnapped 60 Americans Nov. 5. Immigration minister Ron Atkey said a preliminary investigation into Iranian students studying in Canada found that most have legal visas.

Atkey said he ordered the check into the legal status of Iranians attending Canadian universities shortly after the hostage-taking incident took place.

In the U.S. president Jimmy Carter has already ordered the deportation of all Iranians in the country without legal authorization.

When the deposed Shah of Iran first entered a New York hospital, Iranian students in both countries held protests but since the hostage incident the only protests have been by outraged U.S. citizens. American students at several institutions have burned the Ayatollah Khomeini in effigy and Iranian students still in the U.S. have been attacked by angry people.

American hostility does have its humorous aspects though. In Nevada, a brothel operator announced that Iranian students will not be admitted to his house of ill-repute until the hostages are freed.

Brothel operator Joe Conforte said he was fed up with the hypocrisy of Iranian students who support Khomeini but also support his business. Now to get in they must denounce Khomeini and also the shooting of prostitutes in Iran by religious councils.
