Until three years ago, the student union at UNB were a hotbed of activity. Even about the student union sports, but it did was completely different.

The summer of 1988 was a change to the student union. Carl Burgess, the former president of the student union, was elected for sports. He explained that the school with a lot of money expected this year.

Burgess first went to each coach individually explaining how he wanted to boost the exposure of sports teams on campus, and then he collected letters of support. He sent the letters to the Student Union's account. He received full support. Burgess then looked for corporations to fund some of the projects, such as Coastal Graphix Taxi. Thus, he was born.

The first ever soccer game featuring the student union and the UPEI claims he was
