Bulb Culture, Indoors and Out

Never put fresh manure in the soil when planting fall bulbs. Narcissus are particularly sensitive; hyacinths, tulips and others will likely rot if fresh manure is placed near them or comes in contact with the bulbs.

Where the soil is light or poor a little fine bone meal mixed with it will help the bulbs to be beneficial. Many make the mistake of selecting the best shaped narcissus bulbs in preference to the rough heavy ones, which as a rule produce the best blooms.

All flowers of narcissus will open quite as well in water as on the plant if cut when half open or when the flower has bent over and is just opening. Narcissus should be planted early. Get the bulbs in as soon as they can be obtained. American grown bulbs are to be had equal to imported.

Hyacinths and polyanthus narcissus should be planted four inches deep and not more than five or six inches apart for an effective show. Other narcissus and tulips should not be more than three inches deep and above five inches apart.

Crocuses should be planted four or five inches deep and from two to four inches apart. If crocuses are to be left permanently where they are planted they should be planted deeper, but they will not flower so early. Narcissus should be taken up and divided after the third year.

Bulbs of the same kind should be planted evenly, that is at a uniform depth, otherwise they will not flower at the same time, those near the surface flowering earliest.

A good plan is to remove the topsoil from the beds where the bulbs are to be planted; spade the bottom soil; throw back a little of the topsoil and set the bulbs in position. Then carefully cover the bulbs with the remaining soil, smoothing it off level with a rake. This insures all bulbs being planted at a uniform depth.

The Dutch bulb growers cover the bulb lands four inches deep with cow manure every third year in March or April. The manure is dug into the ground and potatoes are planted. Hyacinths are planted in the autumn and the following year tulips or crocuses are planted.

It is not always the largest bulbs of hyacinths that produce the best flowers. The largest bulbs of many varieties have a tendency to produce two inferior spikes of flowers instead of one good one. A rough or rugged bulb, weighty, sound, not too large, is the best to select.

Five or six-inch pots are best for hyacinths for house decoration. Old pots, well washed, are as good as new ones. Prepared moss fibre can be used, but when planting in fibre it is well to use dishes or pots having no drainage hole.

If pots are used only good garden soil that is sufficiently porous to secure good drainage will produce good results. If the soil seems heavy, add one-quarter of sand by bulk and mix thoroughly.

An inverted oyster shell over the drainage hole or a piece of broken crock covered with a little sphagnum moss or moss fibre and a little dry sheep manure, such as sold by seedsmen, well mixed and arranged so the water will drain properly, will produce fine flowers.

When potting hyacinths and other bulbs fill the pots up to a little below the point where the bottom of the bulb is to rest; level the soil and on this place a layer of sand, setting the bulbs in position on the sand. Then fill up the pot with earth, pressing the soil gently but not too firmly around the bulbs.

Have the soil damp at the time the bulbs are planted and do not water them for about six days, and then only sparingly, keeping the soil just damp until root growth is made.

Put the pots away in a cool, airy, dark place, where the temperature will not fall below 40 degrees. Here they may remain until December or January.

By which time the bulbs will have thrown up shoots an inch or two above the soil and the pots will be well filled with roots.

Do not expose the young foliage to too strong light at first. I set my bulbs on the cellar floor near the hot water heater. There is a window in the foundation over the heater and the plants draw up the light, encouraged by the slightly increased temperature. This insures stems of good length for the flowers. An inverted flowerpot placed over the plants will have the same effect.

Be careful not to put the plants in too great a heat at first, as this may destroy the flowers. The temperature should not be higher than 50 to 60 degrees the first six days, and slightly higher thereafter.

Hyacinths grown in pots should be planted in the open ground the following year.

In Holland the flowers of tulips, crocuses and hyacinths grown in the open are cut as soon as they are at their best; this sends all the strength into the foliage, as upon the successful growing of the foliage and the attention then given depend the next year's flowers. In England these bulbs are grown many years in succession and the same can be done here in America if gardeners will take the trouble.

Single hyacinths give the best results for pot culture. Double hyacinths rarely give satisfaction for house cultivation.

Tulips in pots require plenty of room, three are sufficient for a six-inch pot or five in an eight-inch pot, leaving fully an inch space above the soil to the top of the pot to allow for copious waterings, as unless an abundance of water is supplied when the plants are growing rapidly and the flowers developing failure will result. The roots of tulips are a fan and a half or two feet long, threadlike fibres, filling the pot, requiring frequent waterings to support them.

In potting tulips use little drainage material and deep pots, one piece of broken crock over the drainage hole is sufficient; then a little rough turf, mixed with sheep manure and a little bone meal. On this use good garden soil, three parts thoroughly mixed of sand. When the buds begin to show stand the pots in saucers of weak manure water every other day. Never bring the pots out into heat until the bulbs are well rooted.

In Holland tulips are grown in rather poor soil or in land that has been exhausted by a crop of hyacinths the previous year.

Double tulips do as well as single tulips in pots and are equally showy and the flowers last quite as long or longer than the singles. The late flowering and Darwin tulips, amateurs should grow only in the open ground. They flower late in May, after the early tulips have passed away, and are becoming more popular every year.

In potting tulips set the bulbs so the tops will be about on a level with the top of the soil in the pot.

Narcissus are deservedly becoming more popular every year and should be grown in every garden. America is now producing bulbs considered by many superior to Dutch and French bulbs. Truly these are old-fashioned flowers, as Parkinson back in 1629 described many varieties, which have since been greatly multiplied. Narcissus may be grown in pebbles or moss fibre in dishes without drainage. The flowers last well in water when cut, if cut when half grown, as they develop better in water than on the plants. The bulbs may be left undisturbed for several years.

GROWING BULBS IN FIBRE. Roman hyacinths, Dutch hyacinths, frezias, narcissus, tulips, lily of the valley, apreas, irises, lilies and other bulbs can be grown with surprisingly good results in china bowls without drainage. It is an excellent method of growing bulbs for those who have not the convenience of a conservatory, greenhouse or frames, or who have difficulty in obtaining suitable soil; and when the good results obtained are understood the system is sure to become popular. This method, I believe, was originated previous to 1908 by Robert Sydenham, a bulb dealer of Birmingham, England, and has been recommended by bulb dealers everywhere ever since.

The fibre can be obtained from any seedman. It is odorless and clean to handle, and the dishes of bulbs can be placed anywhere about the house without danger of dirty water running from the pots. The fibre is made from old hemp rope, ground up in oyster shells and charcoal to keep it sweet, and possibly other materials.

Rather shallow china or glass bowls are best. Put in from one to three inches of fibre which has first been properly moistened. Thoroughly wet the fibre and then permit all surplus water to drain off. Place the bulbs on the fibre and then fill up the bowls to within an inch of the top. Do not press the fibre so tightly that the roots may not spread freely through it.

Set the bowls away in a dark, cool, airy place. A dark, close closet will do. They will require no attention for two or three weeks. After that keep the fibre moist but not wet. This is a simple matter, but once the fibre becomes dry the bulbs may be ruined. The fibre dries out on top first, indicating when water is needed. If too much water is applied turn up the bowl and drain off the surplus.

When the bulbs have grown about an inch out of the fibre they should be given more light and as much air as possible. A window facing south will put color in the foliage and hasten growth.

Roman hyacinths, frezias, paper white narcissus are good for growing in fibre. The Dutch polyanthus narcissus are dwarfed and have better flowers than the Joss lily. The poetess and the trumpet narcissus give excellent results, especially Emperor and the star shaped Mrs. Langtry.

Hyacinths do well in fibre, but all of the same variety should be used in one bowl or varieties that flower at the same time. Miniature hyacinths and second size bedding hyacinths are inexpensive and will be found satisfactory.

Crocuses, scillas and snowdrops can be had for a small sum and really give wonderful effects.

Lilies and all the spreas may be grown in this manner, and no doubt many other plants can be grown to perfection in this same simple manner. Here is an opportunity to follow the success of others, and also to try experiments in a limited way to see to what extent the list of plants that may be grown in fibre may be increased.—Edward C. Vick in New York Sun.

HATS AND CANES

Some Curious Concepts About Them.

For centuries in Mexico and other Spanish speaking countries the hat has been the object of man's vanity. The custom found its origin in the days when the Hapsburg power was supreme. One of the most enjoyed privileges which the old grandees enjoyed was that of wearing their hats in the presence of royalty. The absolute power of the monarch left them little else to do but enter into rivalry with one another in the splendor of their head coverings.

The gay conceits spread rapidly throughout the Spanish dominions, and even to-day characteristic sugar-loaf hats may be found in Mexico for sale at the astounding price of from $500 to $1,000 for a single hat.

When U. S. soldiers invaded Cuba and Porto Rico in 1898 the Spanish style at once struck their fancy and most of them, who did not come back to the States in hospital ships returned with their sedate campaign hats transformed into contraptions with high pointed crowns, after the Spanish fashion.

From the time when man wandered through the pathless forests bearing on his shoulders a murderous burden with which to strike down his enemies the cane has never entirely gone out of fashion. The modern exquisites would feel as much at sea without it as did the bean of whom Steele's Tatler spoke in 1709, when it said that "the cane had become as indispensable as any of his limbs," and that with "the knocker of 't upon his head, leaning one leg upon 't or whistling with his mouth, he does not know how he should be good company without it."

YOUR LAUNDRY CHECK From the "Chink" Based On Names of Gods.

It appears that Chinese laundrymen have a system of ticketing a bundle of soiled clothes based on the many gods and goddesses of China. Though it is complicated, the washerman seldom delivers a bundle of washed clothes to the wrong person.

Moreover, if the ticket is lost the chances are that one will not get his linen unless he is a particular friend of the proprietor. Instances are of record where an American has gone to court to force the Chinese to yield up the linen, but the judge was not convinced that the case of the white man was a good one.

The Chinese laundryman at the beginning of each week makes out a batch of checks in duplicate to be used as wash tickets. He selects the name of some god or goddess or of some object as the sun, the moon or the stars. To his name he prefixes a number, as "Moon No. 1," "Moon No. 2" and so on. In the space between the two legends—for the signs are repeated twice—he has his own name, as for instance, Kong Loo.

When a customer takes a bundle of washing to the laundry the Chinese, first tearing a ticket in two in a ragged fashion, put one-half on the package for reference, the other half he gives as a receipt.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Garget in Cows. The "White Feather." The expression "He showed the white feather" has its origin in reference to game cocks. Pure-bred game cocks have only red and black feathers, but crossbreds have a white feather in the tail. The slightest impurity in strain is said to destroy the bird's pluck, hence the white feather is used to denote cowardice.

From Cherry-Blossom Land The Japanese Give Good Example. It is a proverb of Cherry Blossom Land that beauty of face and figure depend on womanly health.

What is it that makes our Canadian women often pale, yellow-faced, with dark circles under the eyes, and very often old as forty-five when they should be in their prime? Women suffer from backache, spine-ache and headache, followed by irregularities and as a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose.

ONTARIO WOMEN TESTIFY Chatham, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's medicines have been used in my family at home (especially by my father and mother) ever since I can remember. They always proved very satisfactory. Through overwork I at one time became all run-down in health, was on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. I went on ailing for about two years, during which time I suffered terribly. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it soon built me up in good health and cured me of the nervous condition. I consider it an excellent medicine for the ailments of women."—MRS. CHAS. ## I SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Paris, Ont.—"For five years I suffered from pains caused by displacement of my organs and in my back. All of this time I was unfit for work and was taking different medicines that I thought were good. I saw the advertisement in the papers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it faithfully. I am now in perfect health and do all my own work. I recommend it to others, and give you permission to publish this letter in your little books and in the newspapers as a testimonial."
