LIFE IN MIDDLE AGES

Some of Their Customs and Habits Were Revolting.

A Very Strong Article Written by Strong Penman.

Anis is a realistic age, averse to convention and loving to be told the plained truth about everything. As an appropriate corrective or supplement to the romantic view of mediaeval life, which leaves out of account everything that is not picturesque, we know of nothing better than Mr. Hopkins' essays. Certainly no one would learn from Scott or Hugo that a city in the middle ages had diffused that pungent odor which could be smelled leagues away and which was capable of turning a king, the brave Philippe-Auguste, sick when he put his head one day out of a win-

The conditions of life varied little it different countries, and when Mr. Hopkins raises the curtain a little ever so little-upon old Paris we may be sure that old London and old Vienna were not a whit better. We see a great town without a single drain, roadways heaped with refuse, a river that is an open sewer and slops descending from every window. We see princes upset by swine on the street and meet delicate queens who eat with their fingers and observe in an airy manner that their hands have not washed for eight days and yet look been washed for eight days and yet look nice. Every one, in short, lived in pigsty and behaved "as sich."

Nor have things improved much when we come down to the reign of the Grand Monarque. That ruler had an excellent appetite and was observed to eat at on sitting "four platefuls of different soups a whole pheasant, a partridge, a great plate of salad, two great slices of ham, a plate of mutton seasoned with garlie pastry and after that fruit and hard

Yet this is the only sense in which he and his courtiers may be said to have lived well. They drenched themselves with perfumes to disguise odors less agreeable, ate off plates without forks and plunged their spoons into the common dish. Manuals of good breeding published in the palmy days of French politeness be fore the revolution advise their reader to wash his face nearly every day if possible and warn him against sitting down to table with his hat on, looking jealous ly at his neighbor's plate and heaping too much on his own, choking himself by gulping wine too fast, pocketing fruit at dessert and using his napkin as a pocket handkerchief. Such were the counsels solemnly urged upon gentlemen who figure in Watteau and who wore sky blue and claret colors and sported silk

Hatching There are red Mormons, too. A recent letter to the Detroit Tribune from Pine Ridge, S.D., says Conquering Bear, the old Sioux hief, who was killed while stepping from a car in Omaha the day, was buried here yesterday air

The body of the famous Indian was laid to rest amid the wailings of six widows and 123 children and grandchildren, the most numerous direct family of any known Indian. The whole tribe went to the agency cemetery where the chief was buried. The squaws of the departed chief appeared with their faces painted black. The mourning will continue for one week around the grave- of Conquering Bear as a mark of greatness of the old Indian. He was a brave under Old Roman Nose and participated in all the bat-tles with the Sioux in the last half century. The funeral was one of the argest ever held in the agency. When killed the chief was, in the employ of the exhibition at Omaha, and a check was sent here payable to his widow. Now the six repre sentatives of the family bearing chat have laid claim to the check

A foul breath is one of the greatest afflictions that a man or woman can have. An affliction not only to themselves, but to those with whom they come in contact. A foul breath is a great discourager of affection. It would probably be more so if people only realized just what bad breath means. Bad breath is one of the symptoms of constipation. Some of the other symptoms are sour stomach, loss of appetite, sick and bilious headdizziness, heartburn and distress after eating. These things mean indigestion. They lead to dyspepsia and worse things. They all start with constipation, and constipation is inexcusable because it can be cured—cured. easily, quickly and permanently, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pelthe use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Preservation by Pressure. Preservation of milk by pressure is an idea with which agents of the department of agriculture have been experimenting. Enormous hydraulic pressure lias been applied to samples of milk inclosed in collapsible tin tubes, placed in strong hollow steel cylinders, the pressures ranging from 100 pounds to 100 tons per square inch. It was found that at ordinary temperature milk subjected to pressures of 10 to 15 tons for as many days was sweet at the end of the test, while at lower pressures the souring was not delayed Pressures of 30 tons applied for one hour delayed souring for upward of 24 hours as compared with check samples Pressures of 70 to 95 tons for several minutes to one hour kept milk sweet from two to seven days. When the temperature of the milk was raised to 140 or 170 degrees F., low pressures gave better results than corresponding pressures at ordinary temperatures Up to the present time it has been imssible to completely destroy all the acteria by means of pressure, germ life being particularly renacious Germs of typhoid fever, tuberculosi and other diseases added to the milk for experimental purposes were not killed by the application of 10 to 15 tons for eight days and upward. OLD WEATHER SIGNS.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat has collected a number of curious old weather signs as follows: Thunder on Sunday is considered by the weatherwise the sign of the death of a great man; on Monday the death of a woman; on Tuesday, if in early summer, it foretells an abundance of grain; on Wednesday, warfare is threatened; on Thursday, an abundance of sheep and corn the farmer may reckon upon; on Friday, some great man will be murdered; on Saturday, a general pestilence and great mortality. Friday's weather shows what may be expected on the following Sunday; that is, if it rains on Friday noon, then it will rain on Sunday, but if Friday be clear then Sunday will be fine as well. The twelve days immediately following Christmas denote the weather for the coming twelve months, one day for a month. The day of the month the first snow storm appears indicates the number of snow storms the winter will bring. For example, the first snow storm comes on November 29—look out then, for twenty-nine snow storms.

There is an old saying-which originated perhaps, for the benefit of school children-that there is only one Saturday in the year without sun during some portion of the day.
