DEATH IN THE VIAL.

THE FIFTH TABLET CARRIED A DOSE THAT WAS FATAL.

Why the Doctor Had a Premonition That Misfortune Had Overtaken a Wealthy Planter—How the Story of the Crime Leaked Out.

The story was told by a police commissioner of another city who was in New Orleans recently on a visit.

"The most ingenious murder I ever knew anything about," he said, "was committed by a young physician. He was a rising practitioner at a place where I formerly lived, and with your permission, I will speak of him simply as Dr. Smith.

"About a dozen years ago, as nearly as I remember, the doctor's name went on a visit to a relative in a neighboring city, and one afternoon, on the third or fourth day of his stay, he startled a lady member of the household by remarking that he 'had a feeling' that some misfortune had overtaken a wealthy planter whom they both knew very well, and whom I will call Colonel Jones. The colonel was a prominent resident of the doctor's home town and had a large outlying estate, which he was in the habit of visiting once a week.

"On the day of Smith's singular premonition he was on one of those tours of inspection, but failed to come back, and the following morning his corpse was found lying in a cornfield. He had evidently been dead about 24 hours, and from the appearance of the body seemed to have been seized with some sort of fit or convulsion.

"Of course the affair created a great stir, and the police made a pretty thorough investigation, but the only thing they found that merited any special attention was a small, round vial in the dead man's vest pocket. It was about the diameter of a lead pencil by four inches long, and had originally contained a couple of dozen medicinal tablets, which lying one on top of the other, filled the little bottle to the cork. A few still remained in the bottom.

"Upon inquiry it was learned without trouble that the tablets were a harmless preparation of soda, and that Jones himself had bought them at a local drug store. That ended suspicion in that quarter, and, for lack of anything better, the coroner returned a verdict of death from sunstroke. There was no autopsy.

"Some time after Jones had been buried," I continued the police commissioner, "I learned accidentally of Dr. Smith's curious prophecy, and it set me to thinking. Eventually I evolved a theory, but it was impossible at the time to sustain it with proof, and for five or six years I kept it pieced in my brain, waiting for something to happen. Meanwhile, to everybody's surprise, Dr. Smith went to the dogs. He began by drinking heavily, gradually lost his practice, and finally skipped out to avoid prosecution for cashing a fake draft. After his flight I learned enough to absolutely confirm my theory as to Jones' death. What had really happened was this:

"Dr. Smith owed the old man a considerable sum of money and had given a note, upon which he had forged his father's name as indorser. The planter was pressing him for payment and had threatened suit, which meant inevitable exposure. One day, while they were conversing, Jones pulled out a little glass vial and swallowed one of the tablets it contained, remarking that he took one daily, after dinner, for sour stomach.

"That suggested a diabolical scheme of assassination, which the doctor proceeded to put into execution. Repairing to his office, he made up a duplicate tablet of strychnine, and, encountering the colonel next day, asked him to let him have the vial for a moment, so he could copy the address of the makers from the label.

"Jones handed it over unsuspectingly, and while his attention was briefly diverted elsewhere Smith put in the prepared tablet. He placed it under the top four, thus making it reasonably certain that his victim would take it on the fifth day from that date. Next morning he left town, so as to be far away when the tragedy was consummated, and some mysterious, uncontrollable impulse evidently led him to make the prediction that first excited my suspicion.

"When I made certain of all this, I located Smith in Oklahoma and was on the point of applying for an extradition warrant when he anticipated me by contracting pneumonia and dying. I thereupon returned the case to its mental pigeonhole, where it has remained ever since."

"Pardon me for asking," said one of the listeners, "but is that really a true story, or are you entertaining us with interesting fiction?"

"It is absolutely true," replied the narrator.

"But how did you learn the particulars?"

"Well," said the police commissioner, smiling, "Smith was like most clever criminals—he had one weak spot. He was fool enough to tell a woman. She blabbed."

A cynical woman says that when a man breaks his heart it is the same as when a lobster breaks one of his claws—another apron immediately grows in its place.

Take care of the stomach and the health will take care of itself. If people only realized the soundness of that statement the majority might live to a good old age, like Moses. "The eye undimmed, the natural force unabated." It is in the stomach that the blood is made. It is from the stomach that nourishment is despatched to every part of the body. If the stomach is "weak" it can't do its whole work for each part of the body. If it is diseased the disease will taint the nourishment which is distributed, and so spread disease throughout the body. It was the realization of the importance of the stomach as the very centre of health and the common source of disease, which led Dr. Pierce to prepare his "Golden Medical Discovery." "Diseases which originate in the stomach must be cured through the stomach."

The soundness of this theory is proved every day by cures of diseased organs, heart, liver, lungs, blood,—by the use of the "Discovery," which is solely and singly a medicine for the blood, and a temperance medicine containing no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant.

Some men seem to think because self-preservation is the first law of nature that it is necessary to keep themselves constantly soaked in alcohol.

Editor S. A. Brown, of Benetville, S. C., was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and, after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything. It's a good tonic, and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for tired liver."

PEANUT ADVERTISING.

A Promoter's Method of Advancing the Interests of a Shell Plaster Concern.

"Gimme two cents' worth of those peanuts," said the smooth-faced young man, walking up to the Italian vendor in front of the post office. The Italian measured the peanuts out and at the young man's suggestion, dumped them into the pocket of his coat. They went into the right-hand pocket, but the young man plunged his hand into the pocket on the left-hand side, and hauling out a nut, cracked it open and started to put the contents into his mouth. Suddenly he gave a loud exclamation, and then with apparent indignation, turned to the Italian and said:

"Say, John, what kind of peanuts do you call these?"

"They all right," protested the Italian.

"All right nuthin'," said the young man. "Just look at this," and from inside the peanut that he had just broken open, he pulled a small piece of paper, neatly folded up. Unfolding the paper he read aloud:

"This is no shell game. Use the famous Bumm Bumm Shln Plasters."

The young man took another peanut from the left-hand pocket and cracked that open. Out fell another fold of paper containing the same advertisement. The Italian's eyes were nearly popping out of his head. The young man put on a great show of indignation.

"This is the worst bunco game I ever ran against," he exclaimed. "Take these peanuts back and keep them. I don't want the blame things," and with a rapid motion, he extracted a handful of peanuts from the same left-hand pocket, and throwing them in with the Italian's stock mixed them up. The Italian was leaving the Italian gesticulating wildly, and making frantic efforts to explain.

This much was witnessed by a reporter, who decided forthwith that the young man was up to some game, and the impression which was strengthened when he saw him approach another peanut vender and go through the same performance. So when the reporter accosted him and asked him what the game was, the man was delightfully frank. Here is what he said:

"I get enough fun out of this thing watching the faces of those dagos to pay me for doing it, even if I wasn't getting good pay. Say, it's the greatest game ever played. You see, it's this way. I make a living suggesting ways to advertise to big concerns. Now the Bumm Bumm Shln Plaster company wanted to reach the common people with advertisements of their stuff. So they send for me and ask me for a suggestion. The peanut game was one that I thought out a long time ago, but had never put into operation. The Bumm Bumm people thought it was all right and were willing to give me one open up a bushel of peanuts, fold up these little circulars, put them inside, and then, by the use of a very small quantity of paste of each shell, put them together again. I sold the meat of the nuts to a candy man, and got more for them than I paid for the original bushel."

"I took the lot down to the office of the Bumm Bumm company, and they gave me a check, and that being the end of my contract, I bobbed up with another suggestion. 'You can reach a lot of people with those things, just scattering them around the street,' I says, 'but I've got a better game than that.' Then I told them that for $10 a day I would mix those fake peanuts up with the stocks of vendors, so that every man who bought peanuts on the street would be bound to get at least one of ours. Say, they were dead stuck on the game, and they closed at once. That's all there is to it. You've seen me at work and know how I do it. Say, but isn't it a peach of a game? I bet I've put forty peanut stocks on the bogus since I started out, and I've only been working three days."

How to Reduce Flesh.

I have just received a letter from a correspondent in New Orleans, who tells me that she has reduced herself sixty pounds by following my obesity treatment. Here it is:

Avoid all starchy and sweetened food, all cereals, vegetables containing sugar or starch, such as peas, beans, corn, potatoes, etc. Have your bread toasted; sprinkle it with salt instead of butter. Milk is fattening. Hot water is an excellent substitute for other liquids. Add a little of the juice of lemons or lemons to it, if you choose. Limit your sleeping hours to seven at the outside. No naps. You must take exercise.

If you cannot walk at least five miles a day, and do not wheel, go to one of the institutions where mechanical massage is given. Several of my correspondents report excellent results from this method of getting the vigorous exercise they require. The system is thoroughly wholesome and hot expensive. In reducing flesh the one fact to recollect is that fat is carbon—oxygen destroys or burns out carbon. You must consume the carbon by the oxygen you take through your lungs. The more exercise the more oxygen and consequent destruction of fat by the one healthful method of curing obesity.

The more starch and sugar you eat the more carbon to burn away.

Sweet Odors.

Lavender is the housewife's scent, and tells of good home-making. Violet was the odor of the grand dame long before the advent of the famous Parisian dame of ancient noblesse, who said: "The devil may smell of sulphur if he goes near my violet bouquet."

Florentine, of course. It is the iris florentina, iris root, which gives the violet scent of lavender to the toilet. The rhizomes of this and other iris and flag are scented like violets and form the basis of violet perfumes and dry scents for various pomanders, bags, etc. Orris root is largely cultivated, dried in the sun and prepared in France and Italy.

Chicago Beats the world," announced the tall, slim, traveling man, after he had taken a late lunch in the hotel cafe. "It claims everything and concedes nothing. A novice would be made to think over there that Chicago exploited the universe, stocked it, watered the stock, issued half a dozen series of bonds and run it ever since."

"What do you think I went up against in that town last winter? I was coming out of one of the theatres when a cadaverous looking genius with ten-inch hair asked me if I was a lawyer. I humored him to learn what his game was. 'Well, sir,' he continued, 'you have a chance to make a fortune. You have seen this play, strong on the stage and strong in the box office. It's superb, yet it's a bald-faced, unmitigated, cold-blooded plagiarism. I wrote it every word of it. Not a stroke of the author for damages and I'll give you half.'

"I dodged through the crowd ahead of us and made my escape."

The Cabman Was Posted.

Says an American: "I thought to have a little fun with a Paris cab driver one day, and so I walked up to him and told him to drive me to the tomb of George Washington. He hesitated for about half a second and then told me to jump in. After driving me about half a mile he halted in front of a monument on a square and gravely announced:

"Behold zee tomb of zee George Washington!"

"I got out and walked around and had a good look at the shaft and then returned to the man to say:

"But why does the inscription refer to Christopher Columbus?"

"Because, monsieur," he replied, as he pretended to examine a wheel of his cab, "they were twin brothers and died in each other's arms to save zee crown of England!"

THE HEALTH PROBLEM

supposed. Health depends chiefly upon perfect digestion and pure blood, and the problem is solved very readily by Hood's Sarsaparilla.
