

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 26, 1894.

British Opinion of Nova Scotia and Her People.

The following remarkable criticism of Nova Scotia is from a British weekly. "In Nova Scotia—that garden of the wild Atlantic; the Aëdis of the French, and the land of the Evangeline of Longfellow, the people are a much above the average. Thousands of them are descendants of the Loyalists, who stood firm to the British connection during the revolt of the thirteen colonies, and the blood of the true old English Commonwealth still courses through their veins. Fine, stalwart, active people, their aristocratic countenances and intense affection for the things which are most excellent stamp them as some of the flower of Canada. During the last twenty years, they have carried their country on and up with a stubborn heroism, which renders them deserving of the respect of the entire empire; men who began with a windlass and basket but two decades ago, now possess great and wealthy colonies and so on. Every man is a hero; every man has struggled and won. The successful medical practitioner has not yet forgotten the days when he had holes in his shoes, or as a youth sat down in the city square, homeless, penniless and friendless; the wealthy speculator is not ashamed to refer to the day when he had to retail country maps to earn a living."

The retirement of Richard Croker from the chief direction of Tammany Hall is an event in New York state if not in national politics. No other country has an institution like Tammany, and Tammany never had a boss like Croker. He came from the gutter, has been a prize-fighter and election repeater, and was once charged with murder. His highest civic office was that of alderman, but he wielded a political influence that made him the absolute ruler of New York city and enabled him to control the electoral vote of New York state on more than one occasion. And he was poor and became rich. The question is now who will succeed him, for the idea that New York and its eighteen hundred thousand inhabitants can manage public affairs without a boss is not to be imagined.

W. H. Bryce, of Fredericton, N. B., who has been in England for some months as special agent for New Brunswick of the Dominion Immigration Department, has returned home accompanied by three young Englishmen, who propose to commence farming in this country. He reports immigration of time, owing to the unprecedentedly low price of land in England. He could have got the use of any quantity of land within, say fifty miles of London, rent free, if he would agree to farm it and pay taxes. As things now stand, said Mr. Bryce, English farmers who have money can make almost their own terms with the land owners and are, therefore, disposed to remain at home.

The most difficult feat in the world—and one that has never been successfully performed—is to conduct a newspaper to please everybody. So says an unknown exchange. The poor devil of an editor had apparently tried to perform the feat. No one should attempt such a task. No man who is qualified to conduct a paper will ever attempt it. To please everybody is not the goal of a sensible editor's ambition. To advocate the right, to condemn the wrong, to defend the weak against the powerful, to be just and fair, to be the aim of an editor who is worthy to have control of a newspaper. The backboneless fellow who tries to please everybody and fails, will get no sympathy.

Henry Morley, L. L. D., the distinguished author and lecturer, is dead. Prof. Morley was born in London, September 15, 1822. He was educated at the Moravian school on the Rhine, and at King's College, London, of which college he was made an honorary fellow. He practised medicine a short time in his early life, and was later editor of The Economist, in London. He was the author of a large number of works on various subjects. He was English lecturer at King's College from 1857 to 1866, professor of English language and literature at University College, London, from 1865 to 1889, and upon his retirement to Caribrook in 1889 he was made emeritus professor.

"Canada is a great country, but she is greater by far in her prospects than she is in the present tense," remarks Commander Booth, in announcing his plan for Salvation Army work for this year. It is fifty years since General Booth, the commander's father, commenced his life work for God and humanity, and a jubilee is to be celebrated around the world by a series of great efforts to help and bless humanity. Fifty different schemes are announced for Canada, one for each year of General Booth's life.

Bodyard Kipling says of Canada that it has a fine, hard, tough, bracing climate that puts iron and grit into men's bones, and that if things don't perhaps move so fast as in the States they are better. The latter part of the qualification is peculiarly appropriate just now, when things in the States have been moving very fast the wrong way, and the first part will not displease anyone in Canada. Hard climates make hardy men.

The Posthumous Poems

OF MRS. W. T. TAYLOR, NEE MISS JESSIE BLACKADDER.

LOVE UNSOUGHT.

I stood, but not as the poet,
Whose mind was all aglow
With thoughts of exalted fate,
Too lofty for me to know,
I stood with heart and spirit
Crushed, broken as I sunk low,
Bearing a burden of sorrow,
Which none but myself must know.

I stood by the bed of anguish,
When the first faint streak of day
Gave to the world a glimmer,
Chasing the darkness away,
Gently we lifted the pillow,
Drew softly the curtain aside,
And, as she gazed through the window,
"I'm weary of living," she sighed.

"Weary of waiting and watching,
Weary of hope deferred,
My heart, how it longs for freedom,
As the heart of a caged bird!"
Softly again on the pillow,
We laid the weary head.

"Tell him I loved him only,
But tell not until I am dead."
"Tell him, while from him parted,
The hours went by so slow;
Perhaps he's forgotten his promise,
'Twas made so long ago.

Give him the letters he's written,
He'll know how I valued each word;
For, on the close folded pages,
My tears the loved symbols have blurred.

Tell him I used to doubt him;
But that feeling is long since gone,
Perhaps he will scarcely blame me,
When I realize I watched so long,
Tell him (when death's strong arm
Hath waded my spirit from here),
Tell him, I'll haste to meet him,
When he knocks at the portals there."

The weary head sank lower,
And the lips had ceased to pray;
And the eyes which shone with the light
Of love.

Ope'd to a brighter day,
We dressed her in snowy garments,
Wreathed roses in her hair;
And her face, so fair while living,
In death was still more fair.

I followed and viewed them lower,
Into that narrow cell,
The form that I suffered Angel,
The form that we loved so well,
And then when the grass was springing,
Above her lonely bed,
I stood with her true lover,
And told him the words she said.

Again when the moon had risen,
And the stars were in the sky,
I went to the grave of my darling,
To bid it a long good bye.

I thanked my Heavenly Father,
That she had been spared the pain
Of knowing the love she had given
Was never returned again.

"SQUIRE TAPLEY.

THE EX-POLICE MAGISTRATE OF THE OLD TOWN OF PORTLAND, N. B.

INTERESTING INTERVIEW HAD WITH HIM BY ST. JOHN SUN REPORTER.

There is no more familiar figure in St. John, N. B., than the ex-Police Magistrate, Squire Tapley, as he is familiarly styled by everybody, has been before the public so long in an official capacity that he is known far and wide, and is not less widely respected. The venerable ex-magistrate was recently brought to death's door, and the secret of his complete restoration to health is a matter of interest and importance to men and women everywhere. It having been stated that the restoration was due to the use of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic and Hawker's liver pills, a St. John Sun reporter investigated the case. He was heartily greeted by Squire Tapley, who spoke freely of the case. "It was absolutely true, he said, and the case could not be put too strongly, that Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic and Hawker's liver pills had restored him to health and vigor from a state so serious that it caused both himself and his friends the greatest anxiety. Less of appetite, weakness, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, and a general breaking down and decay of vital powers, were in brief, the symptoms; but they had all vanished under the influence of these wonderful restorative remedies. He began to take Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic and Hawker's liver pills, and within a week after beginning their use he was frequently stepped on the streets and asked the secret of the marvelous change in his manner and appearance. To all such enquiries he had but one answer. "Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic and Hawker's liver pills had wrought the miracle. After having used about eight bottles of tonic and two boxes of pills at a cost of only $4.50, Squire Tapley declares himself a new man. His appetite returned, his sleep restful and refreshing, and he feels thoroughly renewed and invigorated in every respect.

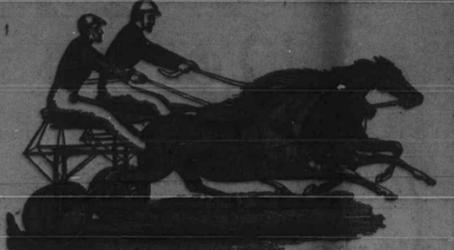

"You may use these statements freely," said Squire Tapley to the reporter; "I feel that I ought to recommend Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic and Hawker's liver pills, and I am doing it every day. Many of my friends are using them on my recommendation. In fact, I consider these remedies the best in the world."

Fellow sufferers here is encouragement for you. Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic is a perfect nerve restorer and invigorator, and blood and health builder, as well as a valuable stomach tonic and aid to digestion. It is a certain cure when faithfully used for all diseases arising from nerve exhaustion, weakened or impaired digestion, an impoverished or impure state of the blood, such as nervousness, weakness, nervous headache, sleeplessness, neuralgia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, loss of memory, loss of appetite, dyspepsia, hysteria, and the prostrating effects of a gripe or any nerve weakness of heart or brain arising from worry, over-train of mind or body, or excess of any nature. Hawker's tonic is especially adapted to the diseases peculiar to women, giving tone to the nerves and stomach, vigor to the mind and body, and strength to the blood, restoring the bloom of health to the pale and delicate.

These remedies can be obtained of all druggists and dealers, price as follows: tonic, fifty cents a bottle, or six bottles for $2.50; pills, twenty-five cents.

The typesetting machines are driving out italics and about the only place where they survive is in school girls' letters. There is some for this style of epistolary poetry. It was Emerson who remarks that of that good English every word is italicized.—Boston Herald.
