"The Two Ideals."
(The editor of Punch, Sir Owen Sennan, is known as a poet of excellent quality as the following will prove.)
Now with the full year Memory holds her trust,
Heavy with such a tale of bitter loss
As never Earth has suffered since the Christ
Hung for us on the Cross.
If God, O Kaiser, makes the vision plain,
Give you on some lone Calvary to see
The Mark of Sorrow Who endured the pain
And those reproachful eyes.
How will you face beneath its crown of thorns
That figure stark against the smoking altar,
The arms outstretched, the sacred head forlorn,
And those reproachful eyes?
How dare you trust the false queen with the truth,
Or think what evil between your hands lies,
Or sin who did that man might live - and you
Who liveth thus may die?

I Am the Newspaper.
POETIC SUMMARY OF WHAT THE NEWSPAPER REPRESENTS.
(Joseph Pien in Chicago Tribune.)
Born of the deep, daily need of the Nation - I am the Voice of Now - incarnate spirit of the Times - Monarch of things that are - my "cold type" burns with the fire - blood of human action. I am fed by arteries of wire that guide the earth. I drink from the cup of every living joy and sorrow. I sleep not - rest not. I know not night nor day, nor season. I know no death, yet I am born again with every morsel - with every noon - with every twilight. I leap into fresh being with every new world's event. Those who created me cease to be - the brain and heart's blood that nourish me go the way of human dissolution. Yet I live on - and on. I am majestic in my strength. - Sublime in my power - Terrible in my Potentialities - yet as democratic as the ragged boy who tells me for a penny. I am the consort of Kings - the partner of capital - the brother of toil. The inspiration of the hopeless - the right arm of the needy - the champion of the oppressed - the conscience of the criminal. I am the epitome of the world's Comedy and Tragedy. My responsibility is Infinite. I speak, and the world stops to listen. I say the word, and battle flames the horizon. I counsel peace and the war lords obey. I am more powerful than any group. I am the same force of Public Opinion. Rightly directed, I am the mightiest power in the world. I am the Backbone of Commerce. The Trial Balzer of Prosperity. I am the teacher of Patriotism. I am the hands of the Clock of Civilization. I am the Newspaper.

Canada and the Mar.
Boston Transcript: - The position of Canada is not different from that of New England in the Civil War. It pays its heavy tribute of blood and sorrow. The noblest and most hopeful youth of the country has been drawn upon. The stories with which we are familiar in the literature of our Civil War - the search for the wounded boy in the hospitals; the long suspense ending in heartbreak; the sacrifice of several sons in the same family; the mainstay and brilliant hope of the future gone - these are the commonplace of the day. But in material sense the Dominion will be stimulated by the war. As New England entered the Civil War provincially, it came out of it national. Its cities grew, and, in spite of the passing blow to the cotton mills, its manufactures developed. Canada has lent valuable support to the Empire, so that its name is blessed in England as it has never been before; and at the same time it has learned its own strength. It will come out of the war much greater than it went in.

Wolfville Druggist Pleases Customers.
A. V. Rand reports customers greatly pleased with the QUICK action of simple backache balm, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-ika. This simple remedy drains the old font matter from the bowels so THOROUGH that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour or gassy stomach. It is so powerful that it is used successfully in appendicitis. Adler-ika never gripes and the INSTANT action is surprising.

The Porridge Habit.
Now that foodstuffs are so dear, Beans, meat, or rather, those that have neglected it, are coming back to porridge. Porridge is a food that contains in itself all the constituents necessary to maintain life. It is also a food of which you never tire. You will tire of ham and eggs, fish, cheese or any other food if taken daily, but you can take porridge for 365 days in the year, and go on doing it indefinitely. It is true that there are some misguided individuals who do without porridge on Sunday morning and take what we call in Scotland a "long lie" and a tea breakfast that is, a fast without porridge. This is foolish as one loses 54 chances of taking porridge but there is a slight compensation: you come back to your porridge on Monday with greater zest than ever. To be successful the porridge habit must be begun early.

The System of Credit.
(From the Busy Day)
One of the greatest problems, perhaps, with which the retail merchant has to contend is the system of giving credit to the consumer. This problem looms especially large here in the Maritime Provinces, where many industries and mercantile houses are absolutely crippled by this most iniquitous practice. In every community there is a percentage of the people who can be rated as "no good." Debtors are contracted by them which they cannot pay, and the result is that this means an increased burden on the "good" customer who, by reason of the additional price asked by the merchant, must pay for the delinquent buyer.
Very few firms are able to operate without the assistance of the banks. This is largely due to the excessive amount of book debts which they carry from year to year. With the financial institutions tightening the strings of their money bags the merchant finds it increasingly difficult to realize upon his book debts. Moreover, he pays out a large sum of money annually in interest and discount, which is a direct drain upon the vitality of the business. Every retailer and wholesaler realizes that it he had the money which is tied up in slow or bad debts he could branch out into new lines, give his customers a far better service, and, more than that, he could sell his wares at a greatly reduced price, because he would have the wherewithal to purchase cheaper.
And from this standpoint of the consumer the present system is wrong. There is apparently no limit to purchasing power if the buyer has the "never" to ask for the credit. Merchants are too prone to "take a chance" with the consumer, and hence the consumer soon finds himself in all sorts of difficulties. By the continued use of the credit system a man is apt, and in many, many cases, actually does, live far beyond his income. He sends to the store and buys "on tick" what he requires. He is charged the top notch price for the article, and keeps no record of his purchase. He does not realize that by paying the price he is actually paying for more over, the consumer under present methods is limited in the selection of his goods. He feels that he must accept the articles offered because there is a large debt balance on the books against him.
But what is the solution? Now it is possible to work on practically a cash basis. The Maritime Provinces are away behind the "times in this respect. In many places Merchants' Associations have been formed for the protection of their joint interests, but the aims of the associations have been frustrated because the members failed to hold together, and set upon a concerted policy. They fear sales will decrease. It is possible sales would decrease for a time, because if every man were compelled to pay cash for his purchases he would not buy so heavily. But the merchant would not suffer because what he would lack in sales he would make up by minimized loss. The merchant would be able to give the buyer a better deal and incidentally make his own business more pleasant and profitable.
The cash system has been tried in many places and has been found to be successful where the merchants held together. What is needed is the determination to wind up accounts and place business on a sound footing. The adoption of such methods would revolutionize things in these provinces; it would give our mercantile and industrial institutions a greater impetus to extend business and would prevent many people from being burdened with the incubus of debt which hangs like a millstone about their necks. The adoption of the cash system or its equivalent would place the business interests of Maritime Canada in a position to take advantage of the great industrial awakening which is sure to follow upon the conclusion of peace.

For half an hour they lingered over their good-bye, but at last Robert rose to go, for he meant it this time.
"So soon, Bobbie, dear?" sighed Mollie. "Couldn't you stay just a little longer?"
"I must go, darling, though I would give ten years of my life to stay another hour with you."
"But - but why, dear?" she begged, "why have you to go so early tonight?"
"Because, dearest," he murmured sadly but resolutely, "it is our union meeting to-night, and if I don't go now I shall be fined ten cents."

KING COLE TEA

Superlative Quality

plus the money-back guarantee

WHEN KING COLE TEA first issued its protective guarantee to the purchaser, three years ago, offering to refund the whole of the purchase money for any package of KING COLE returned, there was a very good reason for this radical departure from usual sales methods. We greatly desired a very general trial of KING COLE TEA. Our faith in its quality was unbounded, for we knew the constant care given to its preparation, but we realized the possible doubt the public might have of a TEA then comparatively new, and so we decided to assume the risk of every trial, and pay back the full purchase price of every package of KING COLE that failed to please. No stronger surety of our good faith could be offered, and we felt confident because of the quality of KING COLE TEA that practically every trial would bring us a permanent customer.

Things have turned out just as we expected. Not one package has been returned. We have never had a request for "Money Back" - we have never heard of a complaint of "King Cole" quality, while "King Cole" sales have been growing steadily larger year by year.
Only exceptional quality could have made such a record, and to-day with more confidence than ever, we invite you to give this tea a test.
The "Money Back" offer is still open; every package is sold on that understanding. What better assurance of Tea value could you have, and what better encouragement to buy your first package of KING COLE TEA?

Booker T. Washington.
BORN IN SLAVERY - RISE TO BE MOST INFLUENTIAL LEADER OF HIS RACE.
Booker T. Washington, who died the other day, was a negro born in slavery shortly before the Civil War. By native ability he had risen to be the most influential leader of his race in the United States. He seems wise, not to have resolved that, for the present at least, the negroes ought not to strive for social and political equality, but to seek industrial efficiency, by which their condition of life and morals would be raised. He was aided by powerful men of the white race, who were fearful of the consequences to the State of a lower race growing fast in numbers and remaining uncivilized. He acquired unusual ability of public speaking, and it is probable that his simple and persuasive oratory was influential, not only to moderate race conflict, but to persuade the whites, as they now seem to be persuaded, that it is better with the negro to use moral and industrial education than brutal repression. The Tuskegee Institute, which he built up, has become the model of many others in the south.
It is not likely, however, that industrial efficiency will solve the negro problem. It succeeds and the negro acquires property and comfort, he will seek a higher education. Then it may not be possible to persuade him to renounce political and perhaps social equality. He cannot be always kept out of the polling booth. - Toronto Weekly Sun.

A Weak Chested Boy.
"My boy, Frank, seemed weak-chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Kings, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis."
Two peevish old dames were sent over to inspect a Red Cross hospital in France. They came back and reported that a black cat was kept as a pet in the institution. The head of the hospital was written to about it, and replied:
"The black cat is the Tommie mascot, and they are fond of her - a lot fonder than they were of the two old cats you sent out here to inspect us." - Tit-Bits.
In not a few instances during the present war the Allies have aided, on both land and sea, by the birds. British sailors have found gulls of considerable service, their presence over the water often helping them to sight the periscopes of submarines.

Melba Gives Residence for Wounded Soldiers.
Mrs. Melba has given her handsome apartment, 90 Avenue Henri Martin, Paris, the rent of which is $6000 a year, for use as a hospital for the wounded soldiers of the Allies. It has a roof garden and a solarium and will be equipped with 50 beds.
Mrs. Melba has denied herself everything since the beginning of the war. Her clothes present now a worn appearance, but she refuses to buy new ones.
She has been one of the heavy sufferers from the war. At its beginning she had no living male relatives. All have been killed except her brother-in-law. Mrs. Melba wears the British ensign, set in diamonds and rubies, which King George gave to her. She has raised approximately $500,000 for war sufferers.

Eczema and Sore Eyes.
"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Plantford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."
I wish I could get my wife to come home, but she'll stick and stick till the last dance is over.
"I'll tell you how to do it."
"How?"
"Just dance three times in succession with the pretty young girl in the bright red dress, and she'll take you home in a hurry."
"His marriage was most unexpected, I believe?"
"Rather, especially to him!"

Personal Appearance.
Bret Harte wrote in one of his stories that you couldn't judge anything by the appearance of his characters. The biggest scamp had a Raphael face, the bravest man in camp was the smallest, the surest shot had but three fingers and the best dressed was the worst gambler in the state.
The same rule often works out in real life. No one wrote more dry philosophical books than England's prize philosopher, but one day while ill, and without consulting any works of reference, he dictated a volume of jokes which are still the best collection to be found in London.
When Stephen Crane wrote his "Red Badge of Courage" old soldiers thought the author must have gone through the war. Just out of college Crane had scarcely ever heard a gun fired, and he was not born until years after Appomattox.
A 220 pound bully was making trouble in a Philadelphia street railway car when a small, pleasant faced youth remonstrated. Everyone expected to see the giant literally crush the young man who had interfered. As they stepped off the car the bully was knocked senseless by a blow of the other's fist - the fist of Billy Rocap then champion amateur lightweight boxer of America.
I heard Bob Bardette, the funny man, tell how the soldier's laughed at a young lop of a cavalry officer until they saw him just once lead a charge. Then they knew it was General Custer, and they laughed no more.
So you cannot always tell what is in a man's head or his fist by his previous work.
