NATIONAL SERVICE

The federal government has selected the first week in the new year in which to begin the active work of its National Service Commission. Next Monday, December 29th, of New Brunswick, and the other provinces and territories will begin handing out cards containing a list of questions which every man between the ages of 18 and 45 is required to answer. The answers to these questions are expected to disclose to the government the extent and character of the man power of Canada available to the country in the event of a national emergency. The contribution of each citizen to the national service is a duty of the highest importance. The war in which Canada has undertaken to do a nation's share is, as we are told by the Empire's leaders, not nearly such in the sense in which it must be won for the good of mankind. The struggle requiring the highest degree of earnestness, determination, sacrifice and fortitude is yet to come. And not only fighting on bloody battlefields alone in victory to come. There are hardships and fighting men the simple requirements, the task before Britain and her allies could be far easier than it is to be. These instruments of the Allies must have of course, and in prodigious quantities and numbers.

But it must be remembered that today's perfectly organized and equipped armies, are in no manner self-sustaining. Every day witnesses the expenditure of vast amounts of munitions, the consumption of food, clothing and medical supplies and the waste of men. All these must be replenished and the original stocks even must be augmented. And upon the civilian population devolves the necessity of keeping up the supplies of every kind which are essential to the maintenance of our fighting machines at a degree of efficiency which will bring victory.

Before much further progress is made in the war it will probably be realized generally that every ounce of human energy residing in the allied countries will be required for the production of the multitude of articles which are necessary to the continued prosecution of the war, and to the economic maintenance of the nations themselves. The application of this energy must be made by the governments. Before it can be applied effectively, the extent and quality of this human energy must be ascertained. The present purpose of the Canadian government is to ascertain just how much and what kind of human energy is available in this country. It is the duty of every citizen to assist the authorities in gathering this desired and necessary information. It is the duty of every man to fill out the card he receives, and to ask for one if he should by chance be overlooked in the distribution of the cards.

Supplied with the information which it seeks the government will then be in a position to employ the country's man power in such ways as will be most useful to the Empire in the present crisis. Later on each man will probably be asked to expend his energies in the direction in which they will be of the most value to the Empire.

It should be recognized that National Service is simply individual service to the nation. Industrial and commercial activities along the lines valuable to the nation are quite as much national service as is military duty. While armies are necessary, everybody can not be a soldier. Some must fight while some must labor to produce. Producers are needed as much as soldiers. Men capable of productive effort can serve their country now by placing themselves at the disposal of the Government to be used as the government thinks it best to use them.

Press reports concerning the visit of Hon. J. A. Murray to the old country, indicate that New Brunswick's Minister of Agriculture has been doing some very effective work in the way of letting people know something about New Brunswick. Hon. Mr. Murray's chief object in going to England was to place the province's land settlement scheme before the people there. The English papers have published columns of comment on the scheme, which everywhere seems to have been received with high favor, and as a result of the Minister's trip across the water it is more than likely that New Brunswick will get a good share of home-seekers from the old country when the war is over. In the meantime the provincial government is going ahead perfecting the details of its farm settlement scheme and will be in a position to provide homes and opportunities for thousands of new comers when they are ready to settle down in this part of threshes the grain harvested separately so that it will be known how much is harvested from each field.

The records just mentioned of the work and crops resulting, together with brief notes made each week, are duly entered on blank forms provided for that purpose. The work of making such notes and entering up the work done in each field does not entail more than one hour's work each month. Each week the farmer mails to the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, a form filled out with full particulars as to the work done, general weather conditions and crop progress on the different fields. The farmer permits to be placed in front of each field a sign stating briefly the method of preparing the land for the crop thereon, or the treatment given the plot that year.

On all these farms, whether located in the Province of Quebec, or in Saskatchewan or Alberta, systematic rotations of crops suitable to the district served as well as the best cultural methods and most suitable varieties of crops are being demonstrated.
