While "The Canadian" will engage fearlessly in the discussion of the great questions in Government. Policy, and general Improvement, which must constantly arouse the Public mind, its columns will, as far as may be consisten with free enquiry and discussion, studiously avoid the exhibition of personal or party rancor and invective, and will at all times cultivate a candid and temperate examination and elucidation of principles and of their practical operation. The belief that a Journal conducted with such views, and in such a spirit, is required by the increased intelligence and population of this locality, and of the country generally, has prompted the Publishers to hazard the undertaking for the support of which they now appeal to the Public.
In soliciting that, they avoid reference to the literary ability, which, at considerable pecusiary risk, but with much confidence in it merit, they have secured; and in avewing some of the leading principles on which "The Canadian" will be conducted, they pledge themselves that it will fearlessly and uncompromisingly advocate full and absolute civil equality among the several religious Sects and denominations in this Province; and as a corollary to this principle, "The Canadian" will strenuously maintain the immediate application of the entire proceeds of the Clergy Reserves to the furtherace of Education, and to other public purposes, with the speedy abolition and extinction of the Rectorica.

"The Canadian" will advocate Reciprocity
