How He Was Killed.

Patrick Keough, of Caplin Bay, to whose death at Boston the Telegram recently referred, was one of the crew of the steam trawler Spray. While the vessel was hauling into the outh Channel an iron strap binding the cable to the net snapped and a piece of the iron striking the man in the left temple with great force felled him to the deck. Deceased died an hour after the accident without recovering consciousness. When the Spray arrived off "T" wharf the officers of the Hanover Street station were notified of the occurrence and Medical Examiner McGrath viewed the body. The deceased has a sister living at 90 Humbolt Avenue, Roxbury. He was well liked by his shipmates.

Stephano is Here Again.

The S. S. Stephano, Capt. Clarke, arrived from New York via Halifax at 4.30 p.m. yesterday. During the entire passage favourable weather was experienced, and the run from Halifax was made in forty hours. She brought a full general cargo and the following passengers: — From New York: Mrs. K. N. Blythe, Mrs H. Barnes, H. Brancze, J. Hausburg, H. Counalde, A. Cunningham and nine in Counalde, A. Cunningham and nine in steerage. From Halifax: Miss B. Rowsell, M. The Swelled Head.

worked for Jabez Beall, who deals in shoes and linseed meal. Fo years he was valued clerk, and Jabez warml praised his work And Winkler's friends would of ten say he should be drawing better pay. "He owes his splendid trade t you; oh, what would poor old Jebe. do, if you decide to flee the coop Twould surely leave him in the soup Young Winkler's head began to swell so many people stopped to tell him what a honeybird he was, and clapped his back with fervent paws. So Winkler then began to feel he was a bigge man than Beall, and he got grouchy mean and sore, because he wasn't drawing more. He thought if he resigned his job his boss would wail around and sob and beg him for a while to stay, and doubtless give hin double pay. And so, in haughty tones he told old Jabez that his feet wer cold. "My services are in demand; good jobs await on evey hand. You don't, I fear, appreciate, how much I've done to make you great." 'Thus Winkler made his little spiel. "I'm glad you quit," said Jabez Beall. "In other days you did quite well, but since your head began to swell you made myself and patrons tired, and I had planned to have you fired." Now Winkler tramps around the town and hunts a job and is turned down, and while his world's a thing of gloom, old Jabez' trade in on the boom.
