Divorced Life

By Helen Hanson Fueste

A Letter and an Inspiration

With a sudden, appalling realization of the fact that she was nearly penniless, Marian sat down that evening and wrote a grim letter to her brother in the West. Page after page she inscribed, spinning off the story of her experiences since coming to New York. Her hurrying pen did not pause or lag. She wrote with a fire and enthusiasm that had rarely characterized one of her letters. Words filtered from her pen, phrases sprang into place, sentences were born, that told in vivid, graphic manner the story of her fruitless quest for employment since arriving in the turbulent town.

When her letter was finished, the hour was late. She had given no thought to the flying hours. The length of her letter amazed her. Letter writing had invariably bored her, yet to-night she had written no less than twenty pages. She ended with a request for a further loan. Having stated her case in full, without withholding a single bitter or discouraging feature of her plight and experiences, she felt amply justified in asking aid.

Before folding and sealing the letter she read it through from start to finish. Its fluency surprised and pleased. She did not doubt that it would bring a remittance. Her hand fatigued and cramped from writing, hung limply at her side. But her eyes glowed into alertness by the importance of sending an effective letter to her brother, scanned the written page critically.

A sudden thought took shape in her mind. "Why on earth have I never up to this minute read the truthful story of a girl's effort to get a job in New York?" The question kept weaving through her thoughts, burning itself into her brain.

Came then a thought which made her jump to her feet. A question leaped to her lips, and she directed it aloud to the silent furniture of her little room. "Why wouldn't some editor buy and print the substance of this letter? she demanded of bed and chairs and dresser.

"I'll make an article out of it and try to sell it," she told herself as she made ready to retire. The thought swept her speedily into contented slumber. The sun was pouring into her room the next time she opened her eyes, and again the question of the night before sprang to her lips. She ate her breakfast with a new zest in life. Then she hurried back to her room and again read the long letter through. More than ever did she feel convinced that here she had the structure of a marketable article. Marian spent the morning rewriting the letter, and by noon she had before her a piece of work with which she felt justified in invading any editorial sanctum in New York. She had written it with never a thought of the rules of writing which an anemic professor had striven to drill into his classes at college. She felt no misgivings as to whether she had split any infinitives or forgotten any of the rules of coherence. She knew that the thing interested her intensely, the oftener she read it. She knew it had come hot from a troubled brain. She felt that it would make its readers see things, understand things. She entitled her effort "Two Weeks in the Jungle."

Marian instinctively knew that her manuscript was marketable.

After luncheon she dressed for the street and set for. She did not pause at a letter box to post the long missive to her brother. A ray of hope had cleaved the darkness, and she thought she saw a way of replenishing her funds without borrowing. Instead she entered a drug store and made a list of newspaper addresses. Then she descended to the subway tube with her manuscript in her handbag. Her former diffidence at invading employers' offices in quest of work had left her. She felt that to-day she went forth with wares of genuine merit to offer. Hope buoyed up her spirits. She had a feeling that she was going to conquer. To-morrow—Trailing the Editors.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The s.s. Kyle arrived here at 4 a.m. to-day, many passengers and their friends were out all night expecting the boat at any minute after 10 o'clock, as it was understood she left St. John's on time. She left for the coast shortly before six o'clock.

The date of the Conception Bay British Society's excursion to St. John's has not yet been fixed, but it is thought to be about the first week in August.

St. Bon's Draw With B. I. S.

No Goals Scored.

The football match between St. Bon's and the B. I. S. last evening resulted in a draw, neither side securing a goal.

The game was rather lively at the start, but towards the finish it became very monotonous for the spectators, as both sides showed a great lack of combination.

Mr. F. Brien acted as referee and the line up was as follows:—

B. I. S.—Clare, goal; T. Duggan, Dunn, backs; Brown, W. Duggan, Ryan, halves; Stimms, Kearney, R. Jackman, Kelly, J. Kavanagh, forwards.

ST. BON'S—St. John, goal; Power, Cleary, backs; Crawford, McGrath, Ryan, halves; W. Callahan, Gear, Jackman, Smith, R. Callahan, forwards.

Stomach Always Balked, Had Constant Indigestion.

Smell of Cooking Made Him Sick—Billions Two Days a Week.

Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Clemmons' experience is not unusual. Nowadays poor stomachs are more the rule than the exception. But the proper treatment is sure to make a quick cure. You can always depend on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, they reach the trouble at once, go right to business, work while you sleep and have you feeling better if not cured next morning.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge P. O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon grew within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man."

Be advised—use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c. per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or by mail from The Catarthozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

New Pastor at Jubilee Church.

The Rev. J. W. Bartlett, the new incumbent at Jubilee Methodist Church, arrived from St. John's on Saturday and officiated at both services at Jubilee Church yesterday. There was a large turnout of the congregation, with full choir in attendance both morning and evening, and the services were entered into heartily.

The Rev. Mr. Bartlett was considered the ablest preacher of his denomination in Newfoundland, and he fully upheld his reputation on his first public appearance in Sydney. In the morning he spoke on the office of the ministry, its importance and dignity as well as its responsibilities; at the evening service he emphasized the church's obligations in the sphere of social work. Mr. Bartlett spoke with genuine eloquence and made a splendid impression on the congregation.—Sydney Post, July 13.

Jumped Overboard.

A case of attempted suicide occurred last night and fortunately did not have serious results. A seaman of the schooner Helen Stewart, while frenzied from alcohol jumped overboard. He was not long in the water before being fished out by fellow shipmates after which the unfortunate seaman was taken into police custody.
